States Act To Cut Toll

CHICAGO (AP) —State legislatures are counter-attacking in the nation's long and losing battle against highway accidents, which now kill an average of 125 Americans a day.

As more and more automobiles jam the highways, and the accident death rate climbs, legislatures are passing laws requiring seat belts, running rattletraps off the roads and reinforcing state highway patrols, an Associated Press survey showed today.

The National Safety Council said today there were 13,710 traffic deaths in the nation during the first four months this year, a two per cent increase over the same period last year.

Legislatures in Montana and North Dakota have approved bills requiring safety belts for front seats of all new cars, starting with the 1966 models.

Gov. Henry Bellmon signed a similar measure for Oklahoma.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York signed a bill to compel used-car dealers to install front seat belts in automobiles of 1963 and later models, beginning Jan. 1, 1967.

The Maryland Legislature made it a crime to operate a car in any intentionally "improper manner so as to cause skidding, spinning of wheels or excessive noise." It also banned the use of a flagman or timer in a race on a street or highway.

A bill designed to get mobile junk heaps off the roads was adopted in Maryland, which hasn't had compulsory auto inspection since the 1930s.

It provides: police, starting next month, can stop any auto they consider defective and order repairs. The drivers will have 10 days to comply. If not, they will lose their licenses. In addition, when used-car titles change hands after Jan. 1 the cars must meet standards to be set forth by the state commissioner of motor vehicles.

The Nevada Legislature approved legislation which forbids motor carriers to operate any vehicle that is found to be in unsafe condition.

Georgia lawmakers provided money for 40 additional state patrolmen and salary increases of about $50 a month in the next two-year period for 450 patrolmen.

A new Colorado law gives the automobile the same status as a gun as a deadly weapon. It provides 1 to 14 years in prison for causing a death with a car deliberately or through extreme recklessness, such as in drag racing. Injuries under similar circumstances can result in 1-to-5 year terms.

The minimum age for a driver's license was raised from 15 to 16 in Montana and from 16 to 17 in Utah except for those who pass an approved training course.

Indiana made all driver licenses probationary for persons under 21, subject to revocation by the Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

Russia Sends Second Rocket Toward Moon

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched a rocket toward the moon today in what appeared to be its second try in a month to make history's first soft landing on the lunar surface.

The Russians first tested their soft-landing system in Luna 5, which crashed on the moon May 12. But they said at the time that the flight had collected valuable data for further attempts.

Luna 6's launching appeared to be the next try at a soft lunar landing, a key step toward putting a man on the moon.

The announcement of the launch by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, made no mention of plans to test a landing system.

The original announcement of the Luna 5 launch did not mention such plans either. But later the Russians announced that an easy landing on the moon would be attempted. Previously they had waited until they had results and then said everything went according to plan.

Six Injured In Three Mishaps

Six persons were hurt in area traffic accidents yesterday including a pedestrian, who was critically injured.

Two were injured in a two-car collision Monday at 8:30 a.m. at the intersection of highway 60 and Route 114, one mile west of Morehouse.

Owen Dale Jones, 18, route one, Essex, driver of a 1961 Chevrolet, pulled out on Highway 60 and struck a 1962 Chevrolet driven by Elvis E. Bailey, 45, of Compton, Calif.

Jones received head and arm cuts and possible internal injuries. His brother, Jerry Jones, 15, was cut on the head, mouth and bruised. Both were taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

In an accident one and a half mile west of Portageville, Ira Anderson, 69, Portageville, struck a pedestrian, Silver Lee Walker, 16. Walker is in a critical condition in a Hayti hospital, suffering from a fractured pelvis and a double right arm fracture. The accident happened on a rural gravel road yesterday.

In a car-truck crash on Highway 61 yesterday near Marston at 2:15 p.m., three persons were injured when a 1962 Chevrolet pickup driven by Myrle Davis, 38, Marston, struck a 1961 Rambler driven by Verley McCord, 70, Marston. Mamie McCord, 56, a passenger in the McCord car was slightly injured, as was Matilda Stevenson, 76, who was bruised on the neck. The driver of the Rambler had chest injuries.

All injured were taken to the Hayti hospital.

Navy Asks To Boost Strength

WASHINGTON AP -- The Navy, taxed by the demands of the war in Viet Nam, has proposed boosting its strength by about 11,000 officers and men, it was learned today.

The Navy wants to do so by prolonging enlistments and active - duty tours of certain skilled and seasoned officers and men for perhaps six months, sources said.

There were strong indications that the Navy proposal was running into heavy weather at the top Defense Department level, where the final decision will be made.

The recommendation was submitted to Pentagon leaders as Secretary of the Navy Paul H. Nitze's appeal for voluntary extensions appeared to be a flop.

In the month since Nitze publicly appealed for Navy men to "make a personal contribution to meeting the present challenge," fewer than 100 officers and only about 200 enlisted men have agreed to stay in uniform three to six months beyond the expiration of their terms of service.

The Navy is about 6,000 short of its manpower goal of 674,115 officers and men.

Thus, to reach that goal and 11,000 more beyond, the Navy would have to freeze the enlistments and active-duty tours of about 17,000 skilled officers and men.

The additional people, sources said, would be used to bring U. S. fleet units in the Pacific up to full strength.

Flyers In Good Condition

ABOARD USS WASP - Astronauts James A. McDivitt and Edward H. White II endured their four-day flight with even less apparent physical difficulties than did some of the Mercury astronauts on much shorter missions, the physician in charge of manned space flight medicine said today.

Even so the physician, Dr. Charles A. Berry, notified Adm. William McCormick, recovery force commander, it probably will be necessary to keep the astronauts on the Wasp until Thursday morning.

At Houston, Tex., officials of the Manned Spacecraft Center said no decisions had been made on when the astronauts will leave the Wasp and return to Houston for a news conference.

Berry said the Gemini physicians were "tremendously optimistic" as to the implications for longer space missions of the future, from observations to date as to symptoms of ill effects on heart or blood vessel systems.

The symptoms have not been as marked as on the three- or - four - hour Mercury missions such as the one made in 1963 by Air Force Maj. L. Gordon Cooper, he said.

Predict Many Space Advances

He was looking to future U.S. man-in-space flights which will be launched on an accelerated schedule as a result of the success of astronauts James A. Divitt and Edward H. White II.

Gemini spacecraft will hook up with other satellites; the pilots will perform intricate maneuvers during trips up to two weeks; and men will walk and work outside their orbiting spacecraft for longer periods than the excursion made by White.

Then on to the moon—perhaps only three years from now— and man's greatest adventure.

Even as McDivitt and White were being hoisted from the Atlantic Ocean Monday after their four-day trip, the Titan 2 rocket for Gemini 5 was being erected at Cape Kennedy.

The crew will be veteran Astronaut L. Gordon Cooper Jr., whose 34-hour American space-flight record was shattered by Gemini 4, and rookie pilot Charles Conrad Jr. They have a late August date with the stars.

Cooper and Conrad are to stay in space for seven days, but space agency officials hinted they could be up for a longer time — based on preliminary data from Gemini 4.

Sewn in the lining of the coat, and untouched, were bills totaling $2,980.

Wilbur Smith while serving as Marine

Service Set For Train Victim

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. at the Murray Lane Baptist church for Wilbur Smith, 25 - year - old former Sikeston resident killed yesterday by a train at Fisk as he ran across a trestle.

The Rev. James Fitch, pastor of the Fellowship Baptist church, will officiate. Burial will be in the Garden of Memories cemetery with the Nunnelee Funeral Home in charge.

Smith had been working in St. Louis in a service station since he left Sikeston two months ago. Prior to moving to St. Louis he had lived in Sikeston 10 years. He attended the public schools through the ninth grade here.

He served in the Marine Corps in 1958 and 1959 in California as a private first class.

He was born in East Prairie May 15, 1940.

Senate Balks At Changes

JEFFERSON CITY AP --The Missouri Senate balked Monday at every suggestion to change its Appropriations Committee's budget figures.

Several were proposed, but the Senate seemed intent upon passing the measures and getting them into a conference committee as quickly as possible--without change.

In a three-hour session, most of the major money bills were passed.

The committee came up with a $356 million general revenue budget--about $6 million less than recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, but $4 million more than was approved by the House.

Sen. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, chairman, said it would leave the state about a $20 million cushion and still provide $10 million for an increase in state aid to schools.

An attempt to appropriate funds for residence centers operated by state colleges at Independence, Malden and West Plains were defeated. It called for an additional $263,000. The centers now are operated with local funds and student fees.

It was opposed as an unwise precedent and a threat to the state's junior college system. The centers were not authorized to begin with, opponents said.

Patterson led the assault in spite of what he called strong criticism from a newspaper in southeast Missouri. He said the proposal was unrealistic and that the state could not provide every student with higher education "within yelling distance of their homes."

CHEESEY STORY

TACOMA, Wash. (AP)--When five-year old Ruth Ann Reha hurt her leg in a bicycle accident and was taken to her family doctor, he told her he would take an X-ray of the leg and then put on a dressing. Said Ruth Ann: "I like roquefort."

Vote On Bonds In July

A special city bond election, asking for a 29 cent increase in the tax levy, will be held during the week of July 26-30, it was announced at last night's city council meeting.

The levy would result from a $1,200,000 sewer and water improvement proposal.

It was announced that the park board has put a ruling into affect that only boys in the Sikeston public schools would be allowed to use the ball parks in summer league baseball beginning 1966.

City Manager Raymert Miller announced that during Clean Up Week there were approximately 150 loads of trash taken from peoples homes.

He also announced that during the last year there has been three miles of sidewalk either repaired or built. He predicts more will be built or repaired next year.

Miller said that 8,768 vehicles used the city dump during the last year. This is one vehicle every 15 minutes in a six-day week.

Five ordinances were put into effect for paving of streets. Those to be paved are Selma from Matthews to Kathleen; North West from Compress Road to a point 505 feet north; Pine from Courtney Drive to Virginia; Daniel from School to Delmar; and Petroleum from Kentucky road to Indiana and Indiana from Missouri to Petroleum.

The W. S. McMullin Construction Company had two bids accepted. On Selma Street the bid was $4.60 per lineal foot and on Northwest Street the bid was $5.50 per lineal foot.

There were three petitions for the paving of streets. Those petitioned to be paved are Selma from Kathleen to Henry; Miller Drive from Indiana to termination; and Indiana from Missouri to Broadway.

Bloomfield To Drill New Well

BLOOMFIELD — Drilling on a new water well here is expected to begin soon, a city official said.

Wednesday the 40-year-old well used to provide the city with water began pumping out sand and slate. Experts concurred that the casing at the well's bottom had eroded away and that, because of its age, the well should be abandoned.

Until the drilling can be completed, an auxiliary well will be used. Attempts will be made to rejuvenate another well, closed eight years ago after sediment clogged its pump.

Assessment Ratio Hiked

BLOOMFIELD -- Real estate assessments in Stoddard county will be at the ratio of 30.4 per cent of true value, State Rep. Tom Baker reported today. This is an increase from the present ratio of 20.47 per cent.

Baker said that Judge Hunter Phillips, chairman of the state tax commission in Jefferson City, has accepted information given him on real estate transactions in Stoddard county, which makes the new assessment ratio possible. Phillips said that the commission would act on the increase proposal before the end of June.

The new figure will be certified to the commissioner of education within 10 days and qualify the county for $60,000 additional school foundation aid, Baker said.

He estimated that the additional money provided by Missouri House bill 33 plus the $60,000 would provide $200,000 more for schools in the county beginning next September without any tax increase.

Rebels Name Negotiators

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic AP -- The Dominican rebels have appointed a peace negotiating team, a move believed to indicate they are easing their opposition to proposals for a political settlement.

Jets Hit Supply Depot

SAIGON, South Viet Nam AP--Thirty-three American jets hit the Vinh supply depot in North Viet Nam again today and pilots reported heavy damage to the target despite intense antiaircraft fire.

The raid on Vinh, 160 miles south of Hanoi, was the heaviest reported as American planes continued to hammer at targets north of the demilitarized zone. Spokesmen said all planes returned safely to their land bases or carrier bases.

Vinh had been hit Monday by U. S. Air Force planes. After the 10 - minute attack today, pilots reported they inflicted extensive damage on the 40 or 50 buildings still standing in the supply depot area. They said exact damage assessments were difficult to make because of the intense ground fire.

GAS WARFARE

TAVARES, Fla. (AP) —Lake Country Sheriff Willis McCall has received three complaints of bee hives being gassed.

The sheriff's office suspects a beekeepers' feud. Since the beekeepers' involved have leases or permissions from the owners to use the orange groves, the sheriff's office thinks that other beekeepers may resent bees other than their own using the available pollen.

Those responsible for the bee gassing can be held liable for presecution for trespass and malicious destruction of private property and possibly even for "entering a grove at night with intent to commit an illegal act," a felony under Florida statutes punishable by imprisonment from two to 10 years.

Plan July Vote On City Water-Sewer Bond Issue

Projected growth of Sikeston would give the city 20,000 population in 1970, Charles Simpson, business manager of the board of public works, said last night.

"The city's location on two railroads and two interstate highways interests industry," he told the Rotary club at the Holiday Inn.

Simpson made one of a series of speeches in behalf of a proposed $1,200,000 bond issue for water and sewer improvements. He said that it is planned to hold the election the last week in July. The improvements are needed, he said, because of the city's growth.

A total of $600,000 would be earmarked for water projects, installation of larger mains and construction of new storage tanks to improve the flow of water to outlying areas of the city. This improvement would be financed by revenue bonds and would result "in not more than a five per cent increase in average residential water bills," the speaker said. Because of low water pressure two fires in the outer perimeter of the city at the same time could create a hazard. The present plant is of 3-million gallon capacity and a peak of 2,800,000 gallons have been used on a summer day.

Funds would be set aside for expansion of both water and sewer trunk lines when they become needed in new growth residential and industrial areas of the city.

To finance improvements in the sewage system $600,000 in general obligation bonds would be issued, necessitating an annual increase of 29 cents on each $100 valuation of property tax for five years in Sikeston, where the tax rate is now $1.55.

Simpson said that the proposed improvements should satisfy the city's growth requirements for 15 years.

G. Herbert Rogers, a retired life insurance man from Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada, was a visiting Rotarian. Dr. Scott Phillips, associate of Dr. Frank Sisson, chiropractor, was a guest. Mary Ann Bruce played the piano.

Years Of Conflict End In Prison Term For Twin

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Years of conflict that resulted in death for wealthy Todd Nicholson have ended in a prison term for his twin brother, Timothy.

Timothy faces one to 10 years in prison. He is not eligible for probation, but could be paroled after about 18 months. A jury of seven men and five women reached the verdict after deliberating two days.

The emotion-charged trial — spread over five and one-half weeks — produced testimony of violent rages, protestations of self-defense and charges of falsehood.

Witnesses for the defense testified Todd possessed an explosive, almost psychotic, temper, often aimed at Timothy. They also said Todd had taken out a $1-million insurance policy on Timothy's life, then presented himself as Timothy for the physical examination. The twins' mother, Roberta Nicholson, confirmed this on the witness stand.

The twins, heirs to the Cudahy meat - packing and Pullman sleeping - car fortunes, had pooled their efforts in profitable real estate investments, mostly through the Sun Development Co. of Phoenix, Ariz.

Superior Court Judge H. Burton Noble set July 9 for sentencing.

If all Commencement speeches were laid end to end it is safe to predict that the world would no longer remember what was said there.

Anyone who fancies that he is mature and almost everyone does, can think a moment and come up with what he believes is good advice for the graduates -- pure nuggets of gold, as it were.

Much solid advice has been delivered to graduates through the years by older men, who sincerely believed that they had an important message to relate to the young, even a mission to do it.

But who can remember what any of them said? The answer is no one. The advice has been ignored, however politely.

Most of the speeches, full of cliches and homelies, haven't even made decent reading in the newspaper accounts about them.

The graduates themselves are too self conscious in their caps and gowns (some of them itch), too concerned about their personal appearance when the spotlight shines on them, too occupied with thinking about a boy friend or girl friend in the class, too happy to be getting out of school or occupied by other diversionary thoughts to listen to an old buzzard tell how he acquired a big bag of sheckles or achieved another form of success.

Sikeston high school has recognized the futility of this type of ceremonial expounding of thread bare themes by unattractive old codgers. The false teeth have ceased rattling there.

A few of the outstanding members of the class in Sikeston give short speeches. No, what they say won't be remembered but most of the class probably will at least remember who said it. At least that's a reasonable hope.

MESSAGE TO MR. WIRTZ

A Cabinet member is presumed to be a public servant, a steward of the public interest. Scratch that presumption.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has just reminded us that he is a lackey of the bosses of organized labor.

The voice of the parrot was heard in the land on Monday. That was when Secretary Wirtz went before the House labor subcommittee to advocate repeal of Section 14 (b) of the Taft - Hartley Act, a move which could abolish voluntary union membership anywhere in America.

The union chiefs decreed that "right-to-work" laws -- now prevailing in 19 states, including Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi -- should be abolished at the Federal level. The Democratic Party incorporated this dogma of the union bosses in the 1964 platform. President Johnson has heeled to the master's command, and obedient Willard Wirtz does the same.

But what union commanders say does not reflect public opinion.

The public says otherwise.

Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N. J., conducted nationwide survey on the right-to-work issue last year. It found that 67 per cent of the American people support the idea of voluntary union membership. Nineteen states have laws that conform with that consensus.

Right-to-work laws do not outlaw unions. They do not discourage union membership. They don't prevent recruiting. They simply prevent the union shop, which forces employes to join a union even if they prefer not to.

Secretary Wirtz' hoop-jumping at the command of organized labor is not altogether surprising. Just two years ago he was arm - twisting in behalf of a $100-a-plate dinner for Senator Harrison A. Williams, Jr. (D-N.J.), an apostle in labor's drive to repeal 14 (b).

It is obvious that Secretary Wirtz has not examined his testimony closely. He is wrong when he says that the supporters of 14 (b) are "virtually all businessmen." The National Right To Work Committee is headed by S. D. Cadwallader, a member of the Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen. We receive communications from union men who do not want 14 (b) repealed -- not because they oppose union but because they fear union despots.

Many good union members insist upon the right to throw out would-be racketeers. A large proportion of workers would prefer to work in a chosen job without being forced into a union.

Had Mr. Wirtz glanced over his shoulder he might have seen a great many farmers who also object strongly to the power politics of big organized labor.

Secretary Wirtz should be reminded of the job permit scandals of the World War II period, which occasionally crop up today, particularly in defense industries. He also should remember the union-agent racketeers who have made entry into a trade impossible for those they don't want. He should heed the words of Representative Phillip M. Landrum (D., Ga.) , coauthor of the Landrum-Griffin Act and an expert on labor and management, who has said:

"When a person is forced to join, forced to pay dues and at the same time denied a voice in union affairs, then what effective checkrein is there on a union officer? Or what effective checkrein is there on the racketeer who takes over a union? Or what effective checkrein is there on the employer who is willing to enter into a dishonest arrangement with a dishonest unin officer or with a racketeer?"

Repeal of Section 14 (b) is an open door to all these evils. That is reason enough to condemn the political pressure which has forced the current Administration to bow to politicking union bosses.

But the crux of the issue has been ignored by organized labor. In every one of the 19 states with right-to-work laws, the voting public could bring about repeal if it so desired. The Taft-Hartley Act does not insist on the right-to-work laws -- it simply permits it where it is wanted by the people. So long as 14 (b) remains in the Federal law, the voters of any state can take either position -- for or against the union shop.

If 14 (b) is repealed, a labor minority can exert a dictatorial power over both workers and businesses in states where the public majority prefers its right to work.

The union lords have not proved their case. They have used the vise of bloc vote control. Therefore, the voters of individual states should have a voice in the kind of labor laws they want. If but one state wanted 14 (b) to remain intact, it should be heard.

There are, in fact, 19 such states. Two-thirds of the American people want 14 (b). They also speak to Secretary Wirtz. Commercial Appeal

THE EGGHEAD EXPLOSION

It is better to learn late than never. - Publilius Syrus

"NEVER IN HISTORY has it been so materially comfortable to be an egghead." The speaker is an anonymous University of Pennsylvania graduate student with a full-expense fellowship in biology. He speaks for the brighter segment of his generation. A few specifics:

The 1936 class of Dartmouth College, as reported in a scientific sampling 25 years later, sent 45 per cent of its graduates on to further study. If present trends hold up, 80 per cent or more of the 1966 graduating class will become candidates for graduate degrees.

Schools such as Princeton, Harvard, Cornell, University of Pennsylvania, and New York University last September sent 60 to 85 per cent of their 1964 liberal arts men into full-time graduate study. (Comparatively few women take graduate school courses, except teaching candidates.).

Of the nation's 450,000 bachelor degree graduates of last June, 100,000 are now working for higher degrees, according to a survey by the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company. More than 90,000 master's degrees were conferred in 1964, as well as 13,000 philosophy doctorates. Each year sees a rise in the number of advanced degrees of between 6 and 7 per cent. Thus the total of graduate degrees awarded this month will be in the order of 110,000.

College and universities are expanding their efforts to supply direly needed candidates for doctorates. Tulane is introducing a program that will give outstanding students up to $8,200 in aid to help them earn doctorates in four years. Harvard picks 25 of its best and brightest and gives them free tuition and up to $2000 a year for five years.

IN THE CICERONIAN SENSE of cultivating a fertile mind with learning all this sounds ideally delightful. But there is another side to the coin. Nobody questions the need for graduate study for scientific and technological pursuits. But placement officers responding to the insurance company survey cited above complained that the "chase after higher degrees is becoming indiscriminate and overdone, especially in non-technical areas." A spokesman for Princeton noted that "a considerable number " of students chose graduate school because of "procrastination, lack of career information, draft apprehension, vocational immaturity, and liberal graduate fellowships."

Placement officers also are beginning to sniff an anti-business attitude on campuses that could become serious. Harvard last year sent 31 graduates to the Peace Corps, only nine fewer than it fielded for business. An age group that resents the conformism its older brothers and sisters sedulously aped fears getting caught in the pin-striped, button - down-collar labyrinth. "We are deeply concerned with the number of college youths who have rejected business as a career," says John E. Harmon, director of manpower development, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

THE COLLEGE CRUSH of the past few years has pushed up to the graduate level, without reducing any of the pressure from below. Enrollment of students aiming to advanced degrees was up about 12 per cent in land-grant institutions this year.

A great many institutions are turning to an 11 or 12 month operation. Year-round higher education would create badly needed space for 1.2 million students.

A further answer would be tightening requirements for admission to graduate schools. Standards are being raised, of course, but only effectively at institutions where standards always have been discriminatingly high.

HAIRSTYLING FOR ALL

OVERHEARD - VERBATIM: "I need about one and a half hours to give a complete restyling. I pre-cut the hair before washing it, then recut and set it. I cover the hair with a net after I've combed it the way I want it. While it's drying the client has time for a manicure." Undoubtedly reflecting their growing disenchantment with the aid extended by the 1964 income tax cut, the nation's independent business proprietors have registered their highest approval yet of the "plow back" tax reform.

In a nationwide balloting on H. R. 2593, introduced by Rep. Charles Chamberlain (Mich.) the independent businessmen voted in favor by a majority of 82%, with 15% opposed and 3% undecided.

This bill, which would permit businessmen to deduct from taxes up to 20% of a year's earnings to a maximum of $30-000 to reinvest in plant inventory and accounts receivable, was introduced in the last session of Congress by Rep. Chamberlain, and supported at that time by 73% of the independent businessmen.

In 1962 when they voted on the same measure, which had been introduced by Sen. John Sparkman (Ala.) and co-sponsored by 24 other senators, including the entire membership of the Senate Small Business Committee, 80% were in favor. In 1959, when the same measure was introduced by Rep. Tom Steed (Okla.) a majority of 72% favored it.

In the present session Rep. Abraham Multer (New York) has two bills introduced which would achieve the same purpose, but for the survey the Chamberlain bill was presented to the nation's independent business proprietors.

The independent business proprietors also think that the enactment of the "plow back" allowance is the most important single action that could be taken to promote expansion and new job opportunities. This is reflected in a separate year long continuous survey being conducted by the Federation, which shows over 80% of the respondents to date favor this move when asked what measures could be taken to accelerate expansion.

The decision of the Organization of American States to send an inter-American peace -keeping force to the Dominican Republic is a long step toward building that organization into something more than a debating society.

Although five of the largest nations -- Chile, Ecuador, Mexico, Peru and Uruguay -- voted against the proposal and Venezuela abstained, and although it is more an emergency prescription against the symptoms than the causes of the political sickness racking the Dominican Republic, it sets a far-reaching precedent.

If the United States can no longer employ the gunboat diplomacy of the 19th century and lomacy of the 19th century and act as the hemisphere's policeman, as our sister republics repeatedly tell us, then the only alternative is for them to accept the fact that the responsibility for what goes on in the hemisphere belongs to all of them.

The vote in the OAS on the Dominican question shows that 14 of the 20 member states realize this.

At the least, the inter-American police will hold a lid on the blood shed in the Dominican Republic and allow the United States to withdraw its troops, or some of them, to where they will be safe from snipers -- both those who fire bullets and those who issue white papers.

But it is to be hoped that the peacekeeping force will accomplish much more than the least -- that it will give the democratic process another chance in the Dominican Republic so that its people may eventually establish a stable, free and progressive government of their own choosing.

It is possible that there could be more success in peaceful negotiating of problems in Asia and Latin America if there were a stronger feeling that the American leadership is sincere in desiring freedom.

This statement by C. Wilson Harder, president of the National Federation of Independent Business, is made in connection with the proposal to eliminate Section 14b of the Taft - Hartley Act, which permits states to enact "right to work" laws.

He said that the proposal to deliver all workers to the domination of labor leaders is quite a cynical reflection on the integrity of the American system, and is bound to have an effect on all nations of the world.

"There is the Biblical injunction," he points out, "that before removing the mote from thy neighbor's eye, thou should first cast out the beam from thine own. Thus, those who oppose the American espousal of freedom no doubt wonder how the American leadership can take a position for freedom for others, while seeking bondage for its own people."

Included was a fine-quality paper made extra-thin for messages to be sent by air - via the Arab's pigeon post.

H. L. Hunt Says

PROPAGANDA'S VICTIMS

Eighty percent of the American people are opposed to Communism. Because Communism hides behind many false masks, it is difficult to oppose this menace without the opposers' motives being impugned.

A person who speaks out against Communism will most likely be branded anit-Catholic, anti - Protestant, anit-Semitic, anti-Negro, or anti-Labor, or labeled with such other epithets as "dangerous right-winger" and "extremist." Whether such labels can be permanently pinned on a citizen whose fault is defense of his country against a mortal enemy depends on the public's attitude.

Public acceptance of smear attacks will assure continuation of these injustices, for the public will be told anything it is willing to accept or will tolerate.

A few citizens bear the brunt of these attacks for their anti-Communist activities because they carry most of the load. If more of our citizenry participated in defending our system of government from Communist subversion, there would be no small embattled faction bearing "active anti-Communist" labels against whom leftists could arouse public opinion.

One recent victim of such agitation has been President Johnson for his stand against Communism in Southeast Asia and Latin America. Nettled at the panic of his advisers in the face of leftist criticism, he complained, "You guys are so busy saving my face, you're going to lose me my pants!"

If everyone devoted ten minutes or more daily before falling asleep at night to opposing Communism, certainly Communism would become less menacing and probably fade away. "Ten minutes each day" for two-thirds of the adult population would amount to 20 million hours daily, and Communism cannot survive that much opposition. HLH

He is Lt. George M. Sheldon, Olumpia, Wash., a former naval combat flier who flew 71 missions in Korea off the carrier Philippine Sea. He also holds five Air Medals and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The chaplain, who served 13 years as a line officer in the Navy after graduating from Annapolis, is highly popular with the nearly 600 members of Mobile Construction Battalion 10.

As one of the Seabees said: "We do hard, sweaty work from 12 to 18 hours a day. When we have a problem, we need someone to talk to who can talk our language. The padre can."

Chaplain Sheldon is 6 foot 1, has hazel eyes, closecropped, iron-gray hair and a Lincolnesque countenance. He wears a gold cross on his shirt and a big colorful Vietnamese jungle hat that makes him easily identifiable from a distance.

"A variety of things led me to the ministry," he said. "When I joined the Episcopal Church in 1955, I made a commitment to Christ and his Church. I began to read the Bible as a coherent whole rather than as bits and piecemeal. Gradually I came to the conviction that this was the work I should follow."

He resigned from active naval duty in 1959 to enter the Divinity School of the Pacific at Berkeley, Calif. After graduating in 1962, he served in parishes in the San Francisco Bay area and Salt Lake City before rejoining the Navy.

The padre works as hard as any Seabee himself. He holds six religious services weekly for the Seabees and Marines, helps in the Military's people-to- people program, and is active in the direction of a native orphanage. But his greatest satisfaction comes from the endless hours of counseling men who come to him for help - Protestants, Catholics and Jews alike.

"They are typical of the problems of men away from home -- loneliness, financial difficulties, and worries over the stability of their marriage," he said, "Occasionally, there is a man who doesn't adjust well to military life and believes he is being picked on.

"Our biggest problems result from communications failures --when men don't get letters from home regularly or don't write home regularly themselves.

"Mail is the greatest morale builder. The simple words "I love you" are still the most important in the world."

Chaplain Sheldon, whose wife and two children live in Oxnard, Calif., hasn't flown an airplane for nine years, still hankers to now and then.

"But I like this work better," he said. "The thrill of flying is essentially selfish and can be shared only with other people in the same game. But any kind of ministry -- whether it be preaching, teaching, nursing or healing -- involves the giving of self to others.

"The tangible rewards are not very great. But the intangible rewards are."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — A bizarre series of comedies took place behind the scenes in the Dominican Republic all adding up to tragedy. They also emphasized the importance of strengthening the peace-keeping machinery of the Western Hemisphere.

The actors who performed on the Dominican stage were charming, temperamental, personalities. The mistakes they made seriously hurt Pan-American cooperation and U.S. prestige. Here are some of the actors and some of their mistakes:

Actor No. 1 is Dr. Jose Mora of Uruguay, Secretary General of the OAS. He holds office for ten years and nobody can remove him. Attached to him for life is charming, very wealthy Senora Mora, who doesn't like to have the Ambassador left our of her sight. Once when he was attending an international conference in Montevideo, she burnt up the airwaves scolding his secretary because the secretary answered the phone in the Ambassador's bedroom. Ham radio operators between Washington and Montevideo were all privileged to tune in.

Ambassador Mora has sent some unique reports back to Washington. They consist of detailed accounts of how he delivered 200 kilos of beans on such and such a street corner at 2 P.M. in Santo Domingo, 220 kilos of beans on another street corner the next day, and 200 kilos of beans or other food at another street corner later. Dr. Mora, from reading these reports, did little toward conciliation, much toward distributing beans.

—ARGENTINE ACTOR—

Actor No. 2 is OAS Ambassador Ricardo Colombo, former Argentine Congressman from San Juan province. Some time ago President Ilia approached Colombo, whose district had lost three elections, and told him he wanted an able man to represent Argentina on the Organization of American States. Colombo, he said, would be just the man.

"But how could I get along in New York? I don't speak English," protested Colombo. Apparently the Argentine Congressman did not know enough about the OAS to realize it was located in Washington, not New York. Nevertheless he was appointed, and last month found himself in the Dominican Republic as head of an OAS peace team.

He was not a huge success. Finally President Johnson, after waiting patiently for the OAS to bring peace, sent his own truce team to Santo Domingo, including his personal adviser, McGeorge Bundy.

Two days later, at 1 A.M., the Argentine Foreign Office in Buenos Aires issued a critical statement that the United States had interfered with the OAS, the OAS peace team returned to Washington, and Argentina withdrew its previous decision to contribute troops to the OAS peace-keeping force.

In Pan American diplomatic circles it was alleged that Dr. Bundy had failed to consult Dr. Colombo and ignored the OAS peace team's existence.

—CHAMPIONS OF DEMOCRACY—

Actor No. 3 is Col. Francisco Caamano Deno who last month wrote a letter to the OAS in Washington inviting the three democracy champions of the Caribbean — ex - Governor Munoz Marin of Puerto Rico, ex-President Romulo Betancourt of Venezuela, and ex-President Pepi Figueres of Costa Rica — to come and investigate whether there was any Communism in the rebel forces. The Caamano letter was read to the OAS by Ambassador Magnet of Chile. But nothing was done. Ambassador Sevilla Sacasa of Nicaragua, a strong friend of the United States and representative of dictator country, discreetly sidetracked the proposal.

Many OAS ambassadors favored the investigation. The three highly respected champions of democracy remained waiting in Washington, subject to call. Finally Venezuelan Ambassador Enrique Tejera Paris read the Caamano letter a second time. Still there was no action. Even today there has been no action on this proposal to investigate the extent of Communism.

Finally the three Democratic champions packed up and left town.

Actor No. 4 is William Tapley Bennett, Ambassador to the Dominican Republic, an experienced diplomat, but credited with being too flustered when he cabled President Johnson asking for military intervention.

It's true that bullets were being fired through the American embassy. But it's also true that diplomats' lives were probably just as safe there as in the nation's capital where the Ambassador of Kuwait and his wife were recently tied hand-and-foot by U.S. gangsters, and where a visiting German publisher was yoked and robbed when standing in a vestibule out of the rain. There are more murders in Washington per month, according to FBI figures, than Americans have been murdered in the Dominican Republic in ten years.

Actor No. 5 is Gen. Antonio Imbert, provisional president of the Dominican Republic under the military junta, and a dashing figure whom Americans distrusted in the past. He was one of those who assassinated Dictator Trujillo and thereafter made himself a "general," now, wears a natty uniform and a Spanish pearl-handled revolver.

Despite his egocentricities, he was picked by special U.S. Ambassador John Bartlow Martin to become head of the military government. Shortly after being put in power by the United States, he turned on the United States, refused to agree to a peace unless he dictated its terms.

These are some of the actors and backstage developments in the tangled, dangerous Dominican crisis, which temporarily at least lost support for the United States in Latin America at a time when we had already lost support in Asia and Africa.

Mrs. Dennis Black

Miss Nancy Boardman And Dennis Black Are Married

Huge baskets of white gladioli tipped in aqua and tied with bows flanked the communion rail and six high mass candles decorated the sanctuary of the St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church Saturday, June 5 at 10 o'clock in the morning for the wedding vows of Miss Nancy Boardman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Boardman of Sikeston and Dennis Black, son of C. E. Black and the late Mrs. Black of St. Louis.

The Right Reverend Monsignor Walter J. McGrane performed the double ring ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass as the couple knelt on the prie dieu in the sanctuary. The pews were marked with white pompon chrysanthemums and aqua streamers.

The wedding march began and the radiant bride, on the arm of her father, was escorted down the flower strewn aisle to the waiting bridegroon.

The bridesmaids, Jackie Freshwater, Patsy Vaughn and Kay Sargent, were dressed in floor-length dresses of aqua chiffon over taffeta, matching slippers and carried bouquets of white gladioli from which aqua streamers fell.

Scott Black, brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Henry Algermissen and Jim Aubuchon, John McMullin, cousin of the bride; Jack Keppel and Larry G. Reynolds were ushers.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the church hall. Mrs. Janet Poppy was in charge of the guest register. She wore a carnation corsage.

A five tiered wedding cake decorated with aqua roses and topped with a miniature bride and groom was served by Sharon Knight. Miss Carol Houelkamp served punch to the guests from a crystal bowl. Mints and nuts were served from silver compotes.

The gift table was overlaid in white and centered with wedding bells and miniature bride and groom. At each end stood baskets of gladioli.

The bride opened and displayed many lovely gifts during the reception.

After the reception a dinner, served by Mrs. H. G. Carrington, Mrs. Lucille Wallen and Mrs. E. H. Laseter, was held in the cafeteria of the church for Mr. and Mrs. Black's sorority and fraternity friends, out-of-town guests and the wedding party.

Mr. Black is teaching in St. Charles. He is a 1964 graduate of Southeast Missouri State College where he was president of T.K.E. Fraternity Greek Governing Board and a member of T.F.C.

Mrs. Black is also a graduate of Southeast Missouri State College where she was president of Sigma Sigma Sigma and Sweetheart of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity and a member of Greek Governing Board Panhellenic Council and A.W.S. She will be teaching English in Wright City.

St. Louis U. Meets Top Ranked Arizona State

OMAHA - The 19th College World Series heads into the second round today with top - ranked Arizona State facing St. Louis and Ohio State meeting Washington State in the top games and the top players awaiting the first major league draft of free agents.

The first round produced no major surprises and much of the talk centered on the draft in New York. It will be a big surprise if Arizona State's Rick Monday, the long-striding 19-year-old outfielder with a Duke Snider swing, isn't the No. 1 choice. The Kansas City A's get first choice.

Monday was far from the top hitter of the first round, though, as he settled for 1-for-5, including a bunt single and sacrifice fly.

Little Bob Fry of Washington State set a Series one-game record of four stolen bases, including a theft of home. He was 3-for-5 and belted a two-run homer as the Cougars whipped Texas 12-5.

Sal Bando of Arizona State slammed a single, double and home run and drove in three runs as the Sun Devils cut down Lafayette 14-1 for their 50th victory, an NCAA record. Righthander John the Robot Pavlik had a no hitter until the seventh and was 3-for-4 at the plate.

The other games belonged to the pitchers. Steve Arlin, Ohio State sophomore right - hander with a sizzling fast ball, stopped hard-hitting Florida State 2-1 on four hits. Arlin set a Big Ten strikeout record.

Ohio State will start John Durant, left-hander with a 5-2 record and 2.22 earned run average against Washington State lefty Joe MacLean, 3-0 and 2.79, at 7 p.m., EST. Arizona State will use Ron Lea, a right - hander who stands 11-2 and 2.92, against St. Louis southpaw Tom Tocco, 5-1 and 1.65 at 9:30.

In the loser's bracket, Florida State's Cliff Ranew, a tall right-hander who is 9-3 and 2.36, will start against Gary Moore of Texas, a lefty who stands 5-3 and 2.85, at 12 p.m.

Connecticut will start Tommy Lawton, sophomore lefty who is 3-1 and 0.36, against Lafayette right-hander Preston Denby, 3-2 and 2.28 at 3 p.m.

The first four games produced five homers, compared to one for the entire 1964 tournament. The St. Louis-Connecticut game was played mostly in light wind-blown drizzle, but the field was covered overnight.

Snead, Middlecoff And Bolt Try For U.S. Open Today

NEW YORK - Sam Snead, Cary Middlecoff, Tommy Bolt and a score of other of golf's biggest names sought to qualify today for the 65th National Open Championship -- and a young assistant pro from Ohio gave them a target.

Duff Lawrence, 27, an employe of the Scioto course in Columbus where Jack Nicklaus got his start, took the lead for qualifying honors Monday by firing a pair of 68s for 136 at Cincinnati.

His six-under-par effort over the Clovernook course in Cincinnati was best of the 90 players who scrambled for 18 berths at Cincinnati, Chicago, Dallas and Portland, Ore., and looked good enough possibly to stand up under today's heavier bombardment.

A total of 369 players, ex-champions and tour regulars, were to fight it out at nine sites for the remaining 101 spots in the 150-man field which tees off June 17 over the Bellerive Country Club in St. Louis.

At Detroit, where 35 players vie for 13 spots, Snead faced such rivals as exchampions Bolt and Middlecoff, Walter Burkemo and Jim Ferrier, both former PGA kings.

Great Pitching Dominates Little League Action

Sikeston's Little League was dominated by two young pitchers in action at Puckett field last night. Lewis downed Kiwanis 4 to 0 in the first contest. In the second game Lions downed A & B Oil Company 5 to 0.

Lewis pitcher Schatzley pitched a one hit contest over Kiwanis. The only hit off of Schatzley was a fourth inning single by centerfielder Hampton.

Lewis rapped out 7 hits off of Kiwanis pitcher Miller who was charged with the loss.

Schatzley also proved that the proverb "Pitchers can't hit" was wrong as he racked out two hits, one a home run in the third. Burnett also had two hits for Lewis.

The Lions downed a tough A & B Oil Company team 5 to 0.

Pitcher Vaught gave up only 4 hits in winning his no run contest. Dodd was the losing hurler for A & B, giving up only 8 hits and pitching well himself.

Hailey and Evans furnished the power for the Lions, each smashing a home run. Evans hit his in the second inning with no one on base. Hailey blasted his in the first with two men on base. Hailey also had a triple, and Evans had a double.

Sports TALK

By DON SAVAGE

The St. Louis Cardinals' early season problems, which finds them now playing even .500 baseball could be contributed to a number of factors.

Before we discuss this topic any further, it might be a good idea to look back at last season. At this time last year the Cards were in fourth place, 3 1/2 games off the pace of the then league leading Philadelphia Phillies, and only three games over the .500 mark.

This season, the brightest light of the early-season Cardinal performances was World Series hero Bob Gibson. The big righthander won 7 straight games, three of which were shut-outs, before the season was a month old.

He also was bidding for the league's strike-out championship, with 45 in his first 47 innings. Last year he barely missed it, being nosed out by Pittsburgh's Bob Veale.

Among the hitters, Curt Flood and Lou Brock were the early leaders. Flood assembled a 15 game hitting streak, while Brock put together one of eight games before being stopped.

In addition, Brock looked like he was going to furnish some basestealing opposition to Los Angeles' Maury Wills, who has been the leader the last few years. Wills beat Brock by ten in 1964, 53 to 43.

In the early-season going, Brock stole 13 times on his first 15 attempts, and both times he was thrown out at third base on calls that were questioned.

Two rookies also showing signs of future prominence are: Steve Carlton, a 20-year-old lefthander from Florida and Nelson Briles, a 21-year-old from Dorris, California, both turned in fine bullpen performances.

The Cardinals have had many handicaps to overcome, which could help explain their slow start. Tim McCarver suffered a broken index finger on his right hand during spring training and missed the first week of the season. Ken Boyer lost several games on two different occasions with severe pains in his lower back, and Bill White suffered a severely bruised right bone in a dive for a line drive through the infield.

PITCHING -- Luis Tiant, Cleveland, pitched a two-hitter and retired 15 consecutive batters at one stretch as the Cleveland Indians edged Minnesota 2-1 for their fifth straight triumph.

BATTING - Al Kaline, Detroit slammed two homers and a double, his second homer coming with a man on in the eight inning and giving the Tigers a 6-5 triumph over the Los Angeles Angels.

Leslie Remains Unbeaten First National Wins

In last night's action, again at Farris field, Fabick went down as Leslie Insurance rolled to a 7 to 5 victory in the first game. Colwick stared for Leslie Insurance in belting the first home run in the American League to add to his two other hits of the night. Wake went all the way on the mound for Leslie while Bye was stranded with the loss.

First National pounded in 7 runs in the last two innings of the second game to come from behind 6 to 0. Security Federal scored their only runs in the first two innings. Ensor gave up only two hits to take the win, and McConnell took the loss for Security Federal.

You don't have to like golf to like our Buick "Swinging Sales Spree."

Just driving. (And saving money.)

The reason you have to like driving is that once you get in a Buick Special (above), you may never get out again. If you like golf, a Buick Special could save enough to pay for some new equipment. If you don't you can drive out to the club in style, and watch the others frustrate themselves—and still save money on gas. (If you patronize a drive-in bank, that solves the problem of getting out of the car, too.) We know you'll like Buick comfort, luxury, engineering and quality. And our Wildcat power. These are the things we put in every Buick. And right now—during our Swinging Sales Spree—is the best time to come in and see them. (The "greens fees" are very low.)

Proposed legislation to reduce excise tax on new passenger automobiles provides a refund of such tax reduction where a passenger automobile is sold to a retail purchaser after May 14, 1965 and before July 1, 1965, when the excise tax reduction becomes effective. Where a refund is authorized by this legislation, General Motors Corporation will make a cash payment to such a purchaser in the amount of the excise tax reduction.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I was 30 when I married an attorney. He traveled for an oil company and asked me to quit my job so we could travel together. (I was a financial officer in a large firm.) I did -- happily.

After 14 years of marriage my husband died suddenly. I felt as if my world had fallen apart. The doctor suggested I go back to work.

After six unsuccessful job interviews it became clear to me that nobody wanted to employ a 45-year-old woman. A kindly personnel director suggested that I give my age as 35. I hated to be deceitful but decided to take his advice. Within the week I was offered three positions and I now have an extremely fine job. My boss calls me the answer to his prayers. He has given me two substantial salary increases.

Why does industry refuse to hire competent, experienced people because they are over 40?

If there is a sensible answer to this I would like to read it in your column.

DON'T HAD TO LIE TO WORK

Dear Had To: So would I. The Ann Landers column will provide the forum if someone in industry will respond to this woman's letter.

Dear Ann Landers: You often come to the front for waitresses, bus drivers, taxi drivers, firemen, policemen and office girls. Will you please print a few words to make life easier for those of us who sell ladies ready-to-wear?

I've been in the business for 15 years. The women I serve are becoming increasingly lazy inconsiderate and thoughtless. One of my customers refuses to believe that she now wears a size 16 dress. She thinks of herself as a size 12, which she was five years ago. Only after several garments will she try a size 16.

I have seen customers step out of chiffon and silk gowns and leave them on the floor. They put their heels through hems, break zippers, smear lipstick and eye make-up on delicate fabrics, then ask innocently, "Did I do that?"

Please publish my letter with your comments.

DISGUSTED WITH LADIES

Dear Disgusted: Females who are not ladies, I suggest this column be tucked up in the fitting rooms of ready-to-wear shops where the problem exists. Sometimes shame can work wonders.

Dear Ann Landers: Why would a handsome, successful, respected man leave a beautiful, brilliant, accomplished, generous, loving wife for a cheap, loud, crude, ignorant, gold-digging tramp?

The couple has been married 10 years and they have no children. Everyone thought they were ideally suited and blissfully happy. Why? Why? Why?

Dear No; Maybe he is going through the male menopause and is off his trolley. Or, perhaps, that cheap, loud, crude, ignorant gold-digging tramp fills an emotional need in the man that his beautiful, brilliant, accomplished, generous, loving wife does not.

Do you feel ill at ease . . . out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

MONROE COUNTY APPEAL AND PARIS MERCURY

'Lord, We Confess Our Sins, We Ask Forgiveness, We Pray for Rain!'

By FRED SOLLISH

IN the Spring of 1946, artist Norman Rockwell, in search of a typical country editor for a Saturday Evening Post series on the professions, opened the door to the weekly Monroe County Appeal in Monroe County, Mo., and discovered what he had been looking for.

The world Rockwell entered at the Appeal was a Model-T world where farmers stood about in faded gray coveralls and puffed corn cob pipes as they talked about their cattle and crops.

It was a world of little boys with bubble gum in their mouths and fishing poles slung across their freckled shoulders, trodding home to supper along sandy roads while a soft, breeze-stirred dusk descended on just another warm Missouri afternoon.

In the newspaper office cluttered with dried and yellowed copies from the past and the worn ends of wooden type strewn across the outer edges of ink-stained desks, it was a sunrise to sunset world that slept in the secure bosom of the great Midwest.

MONROE COUNTY APPEAL

We Confess Our Sins, We Ask Forgiveness, We Pray for Rain!

AND THE RAINS CAME. PRAISE GOD FROM WHOM ALL BLESSINGS FLOW

Late War News

August, 1941—If you pray for rain and it comes, you've got to be thankful: Blanton was. These ran one week apart.

For the country editor in those quiet days shortly after World War II, there was time; time enough to know people by their first names and time enough for them to know his. There was even time for tomorrow.

Today, nearly twenty years later, not much has happened at the Monroe County Appeal to change this spirit. What Norman Rockwell found at the Appeal still seems to be there. Yet there have been a few changes made.

Jack Blanton, whose 1941 prayer headline asking for rain, drew national attention when it rained an hour after the paper was off the press, died in 1955 and was succeeded by the partnership of his son, Edgar J. Blanton, and R. I. "Si" Colborn.

It is Si Colborn who edits the paper today. He, like Jack Blanton, is a Baptist and a Democrat, probably in that order, and he won't tell whether or not there were clouds in the sky when Jack Blanton wrote that headline.

There have also been a few physical revisions at the Appeal. The main door was moved from the center of the shop some 15 feet to the right, and the old Miehle #1 press was traded recently for a later model, as was the office Chevrolet. Nothing, however, has changed the newspaper in any basic manner.

But change, in a small town, has a relationship with time that plays tricks with a visitor's imagination. If what Norman Rockwell saw can be described as the "timeless spirit" of country journalism—if his sketches convey an image of the country editor much as one would have expected to find him a century before—this image is as difficult to contain on paper as a ghost.

Si Colborn admired Jack Blanton and actively seeks to continue his traditions. But they're not in the furniture.

Currently, the Appeal is running a series of columns written in 1919 by Jack Blanton's father, Benjamin Franklin "Pappy" Blanton. The column runs under a cut of bearded "Pappy" and is titled, "When I Was A Boy."

Since "Pappy" was a boy at the same time as Mark Twain, and thus at the same time as Huckleberry Finn, there's at least a continuum of the country spirit at the Appeal. And it was this continuum that we journeyed to Paris, Mo., 135 miles northwest of St. Louis to find.

Paris is 25 miles up from Mexico, Mo. The road between the two towns, which is mostly straight, cuts through Poland hog and Angus cattle country. It's a smooth highway and the livestock vans can move on it at 70.

You don't say the town is located, because it sets. It sets—12 miles from the birthplace of Mark Twain—in a small valley where the great plains begin. Its population is stable at about 2,000 and has been since the land boom that brought Iowa and Illinois farmers in gave way to the urban migrations that took their children out.

There was a time when Monroe County, of which Paris is the seat, had a population of about 22,000. But that was in the 1880's when it held slaves. Now, the County's down to under half that.

There was also a time when Monroe County was mostly Baptist, and there weren't more than ten Republicans in its 669 square miles. Now there are barely 1,400 Baptists and the County is faced with creeping conservatism.

Average Income $4,500.—'Enough'

Economically, Paris is better off than many agricultural communities its size. The average income is about $4,500 a year which, as Si Colborn puts it, is enough to buy all the necessities and some of the luxuries. This too, has been stable for some time, even though a local appliance dealer is said to have netted almost $30,000 a year ago.

You wouldn't say shopping along Paris's one main street, Main Street, is brisk, but it is much more adequate than it used to be. There's a clothing store for men, two for women, two banks, two groceries, a hardware store, one or two feed stores and two other appliance dealerships that sell heavy duty equipment. The hardware store sells saddles to tourists.

Paris, an alcoholically dry town, owns its own water supply. It recently began purchasing electricity to sell back to the public at a profit. Si Colborn proudly calls this socialistic, but says it saves taxes.

The Economics of Foxhunting: Increased Sale of Saddles

The County, noted for mule breeding before World War II, has revived its saddle club, an equestrian pastime extinct for a number of years, and it now has over 250 members who ride to hounds. But time was in Monroe County when nearly every family owned a saddle horse, Si Colborn says.

Si Colborn doesn't think much of fox hunting, "sociologically speaking, or any other way," but the saddle club for the most part buys saddles from the hardware dealer. More money for the saddle dealer means more money kept in the County, and this is what Si Colborn supports in his editorials.

But Paris is still worried about economics. Farm depopulation has precipitated a crisis in rural America that Si Colborn feels can only be solved by bringing in more industry.

Right now Paris has a garment factory that employs about 75 local people. It isn't enough to "move the town forward," according to Si Colborn. What is needed is another factory, and he is crusading for a $300,000 bond issue to build one for any manufacturer who will lease it.

The Monroe County Appeal Revisited

The fact that Paris doesn't even have a railroad siding hasn't bothered people much. The Wabash Cannonball used to whistle by town in the old days as a constant reminder of this, and everyone's sort of used to it by now. Besides, trucking to Mexico is just as fast.

But, it's facing these problems, Si Colborn feels, that has changed life for him, the country editor, most. There's a growing sophistication in the farmlands and Si Colborn's knowledge of economics and politics, especially in Monroe County, is anything but naive. He says he can't afford to have it any other way.

During Gov. John Dalton's last term, Si Colborn served as an honorary Colonel and he is now an adviser to the Missouri Historical Society.

Three years ago, he journeyed to New York City with the Governor to seek more industry for the State. That he was selected as one of Missouri's travelling salesmen is testimony to his influence.

But nothing came of the trip as far as business goes. Nevertheless, Si Colborn likes to speak fondly of the Knickerbocker Brewery "down town next to some high rise apartment houses" that wouldn't move to Missouri for anything.

Television, of course, can't be kept out. If twenty years ago there was hardly a farmer without an electrical outlet, today there's hardly a farmer with an electrical outlet that hasn't heard of Soupy Sales.

It's true that some of Paris's residents still prefer farm auctions to Johnny Carson, but once they would have been more than two channels apart.

Si Colborn, who is 65, is well aware of this change. Television he complains, has made the people of Paris impatient. "These days," he says, "preachers can't preach for an hour and a half the way they used to. No one'll sit in Church and listen that long. Twenty minutes is the most they put up with."

Si Colborn wonders aloud how long they'll be patient enough to read, and to read his newspaper. Mechanical costs are soaring, competition is getting keener from other newspapers, especially dailies, his plant is outdated and the young people aren't taking an interest in local affairs the way they should: These are the things that Si Colborn is worried about.

Circulation Unchanged Means Income Unchanged

Since circulation has barely changed in twenty years (it's still somewhat under 3,000) advertising continues to sell for 43 cents a line. Inflation is a source of concern. Si Colborn's income has remained fairly constant. He'd like to convert to offset, but can't afford it.

On the editorial side, however, there's no problem. Si Colborn maintains what he feels is a "high standard." It's his personal pride. And in Missouri, he insists, personal pride is a way of life. ("You have to live with your readers, sure, but you don't have to be afraid of them.") When his advertising manager skipped town several years ago because of impending sodomy charges, he put the story on page one.

He also says it is necessary to have opinions on everything—and he does. His editorials range from the Vietnam crisis to how come there was a basketball game on a day when school was closed due to a snow storm.

Si Colborn, it might be said, is probably the number one citizen around Paris, although by his own admission he couldn't get elected dog-catcher. By having his own opinions and by selfishly cherishing his independence, he says, he's probably made as many enemies as friends. Once he had to face a shotgun-carrying father who was angered by a story he didn't want printed about his daughter.

Still, like Jack Blanton before him, and Pappy Blanton before him, his blue eyes light up when it's time for a fight, and his warm, sincere smile lulls an opponent into believing that he'll leave intact. Si Colborn wouldn't do violence to a fly, but he's probably won an awful lot of arguments that way. He talked the shotgun-carrying father into going home.

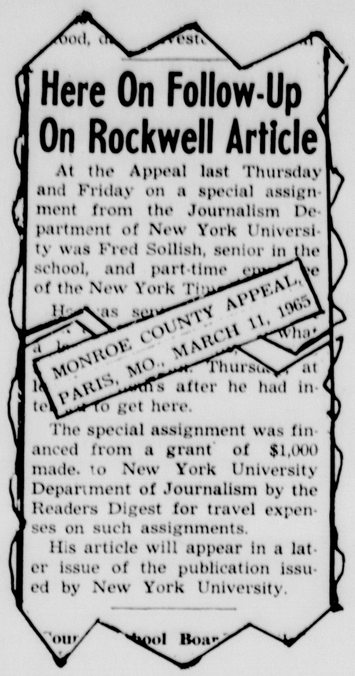
Life in Paris, Mo., Changes—But Not Much

So if in the final analysis Si Colborn, and Paris, Mo., and the Monroe County Appeal sound like they're all a part of the past, they are. If they are paradoxically contemporary, they're that too.

Life in Paris has changed some in the last twenty years—so have the people, and so have the editors at the Monroe County Appeal. Sociologically, if you prefer—things are different. They've got to be.

Yet at the Monroe County Appeal three successively keen-eyed, wily-witted editors, politically influential and economically well-versed, have calmly watched generations of farmers replace one form of progress with another.

What maintains the continuum? Well, perhaps it's the paper itself that keeps the spirit of the country editor alive. Who knows, even, if bearded "Pappy" Blanton doesn't sneak in at night to write the editorials?



In Paris, Mo., a visitor still makes news.

Hearnes Calls For Changes In System

COLUMBIA, Mo. - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes says "we are going to have to modernize and reorganize some of the antiquated machinery of our state government."

He made the comment Saturday night in a speech prepared for the annual convention of the Young Democratic Clubs of Missouri.

"Much of the mechanics of our state government," he said, "was developed as much as a century ago to serve an agricultural society. Proof in point, look at our insurance laws many of them dating back to the mid-1800s.

"Where necessary, Missouri is going to have to reform her system of state and local governments so these governments can cope effectively with the increased responsibilities which are ours.

"The party which provides the leadership and the initiative to effect this reform will be the dominant party of Missouri in the years to come. I am convinced that it will be the Democratic party and already we are way out in front."

Hearnes said Missouri must develop a comprehensive state plan "so that our growth will be a planned growth, so that our economy will be a planned economy designed to fit the various needs of our multiple industries and occupations."

Hearnes said such advanced planning is essential in several fields. He named state facilities, recreation, land use, the state's economy, intercity transportation, population growth and shift, recreation resources and needs.

The governor emphasized "that failure to plan will weaken state government, burden the economy with waste and unnecessary taxation and serve as an open invitation to the party of opposition to attack."

He appealed to the Young Democrats to work together "to serve the people and serve responsibility."

Water Lines Near Completion

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Water Supply District No. 1 of Pemiscot County, the construction of which was begun in October 1964, is rapidly nearing the point where residents along the water lines will soon be water users.

In fact, a few of the customers-to-be are already being served in a sort of a fashion because their pumping equipment has "gone out" on them and it would be a financial burden if they had to replace worn-out equipment with the water district wintin a week, or two weeks at the most, away from service.

All the lines have been laid, connections made from the water district lines to the meter boxes, and in most instances lines laid from the houses to the meter box, and actually meters are in but not turned on.

All lines are down and ready to put water into users home or wherever it is to go, all equipment is in place, the water storage towers at the plant in the Chapel community, four miles west of Caruthersville, and at Braggadocio are about ready and the two booster pump equipment is in place.

According to Robert Moore, superintendent in charge of construction for the Casey-Turner & Moore Construction Co., of Tulsa, Okla., contractors on the job, there are a couple of things that have to be done before water can be turned on and the keys handed over to the water district officials.

Ark - Mo Power Company workmen have to complete a third line to the Cottonwood area booster pump station, about three miles north of Cottonwood Point, where a 3 phase, 60 cycle booster pump keeps the water pressure working on that end of the line. A similar booster pump is located about one mile east of Braggadocio.

ASSEMBLY CHOOSES OWN FISCAL OFFICER

The state Committee on Fiscal Affairs, created after three attempts by the General Assembly and signed into law March 3 by Governor Warren Hearnes, has selected its first fiscal officer as a watchdog over state appropriations.

The new officer is Arthur W. Betts, a veteran of nearly 20 years' experience in state government who prior to accepting this position had been chief analyst for the office of the Comptroller and Budget Direc. He resigned this position in January.

The latter office is directly controlled by the executive branch of Missouri's government while in his new capacity, Betts will answer solely to the Committee on Fiscal Affairs headed by Rep. Bernard (Doc) Simcoe, a Callaway County Democrat who also heads the House Appropriations Committee.

There are many who have felt that creation of such an agency would cause a duplication of the work done by the budget office. This is forbidden under provisions of the bill but was partially former Gov. John Dalton's reason for vetoing a similar proposal.

The late Gov. James T. Blair also stomped out similar attempts at legislative fiscal watchdogging.

Betts served under the administration of both Blair and Dalton. He also has worked in the office of Legislative Research, the outfit charged with drafting bills for members of the General Assembly.

Thus, Betts acknowledges that he has worked both sides of a highly competitive political fence and now has returned to the folds of the legislature.

Neither Simcoe nor Betts feels that the fiscal officer will be duplicating the budget office's work but now they are working from the ground up and remain somewhat uncertain as to what exactly lies ahead.

The policy adopted by the committee as a blueprint for Betts to follow provides that any legislator seeking information on fiscal matters must first apply to the committee and if approved, Betts will investigate.

It is apparent that the General Assembly, in finally winning approval of its own fiscal watchdog, wants to play a greater role in determining how state appropriations are being carried out, if the money sought by agencies and departments is justified and similar activities.

Prior to creation of the committee, the General Assembly was at the mercy of the executive branch as far as determining money matters. By setting up its own committee, the legislature thus will achieve more governmental independence.

Simcoe said that cooperation shown by Governor Hearnes and the budget office staff is commendable, but added that this hasn't always been the case.

MO. CHURCH COUNCIL BACKS BRACERO LAW

The Missouri Council of Churches has contacted all Missouri members of Congress as well as Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz to express its support of the Labor Department's ban on the importation of migrant workers into the United States.

The effect in Missouri of this anti-bracero policy is being felt in a strange manner. Missouri has had no bracero laborers since 1961 and then it was mainly in cotton chopping in the bootheel.

However, according to the Missouri Division of Employment Security the anti-bracero action is placing this state in more of a position of supplying a labor force for other states, such as California which has been hardest hit by the change.

Representatives of large farm operations in California were to be in Missouri this week seeking laborers.

The Council of Churches, which normally involves itself in church-related matters, has taken the stand that migrant American workers were being "dispossessed, disadvantaged and discriminated against" under the former practice of importing workers from Mexico.

What such pious organizations apparently fail to realize is the difficulty large farm operators have in securing adequate American laborers for picking their crops, much of which remains a job to be done by hand.

In the news recently was a report that one California strawberry grower plowed under this year's crop because it was rotting on the ground with no pickers available.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENTS

It appears now the position of county superintendents of schools will be abolished for areas where they are not needed. A bill to this effect has passed both houses of the General Assembly in one form or another.

The Senate has returned the bill to the House for acceptance of minor changes. One Senator reported that at present 26 Missouri counties have no superintendents because the job is useless there.

Fertility & Sterility

FEMALE INFERTILITY

Much more is known of female infertility, if only because women have more readily submitted to examination, study and therapy. Their problems are divided into two categories:

Primary infertility describes cases in which women have not been able to conceive after at least one year of effort.

Secondary infertility describes cases in which women:

1. Have had one child but are subsequently infertile.
2. Suffer repeated miscarriages.
3. Repeatedly deliver so prematurely that the infant cannot survive.
4. Fail to conceive for no discernible reason; this group is referred to as the idiopathically infertile (unknown cause).

Until recently, the prognosis was bleak for women who did not ovulate. Either their pituitaries were not secreting enough follicle-stimulating hormone to stimulate the production of ova or the ovaries themselves were malfunctioning.

HORMONE SUPPLEMENTATION

In an early therapeutic attack on this problem, the serum of pregnant mares was administered inasmuch as it was rich in FSH. This approach failed for reasons later ascribed to species specificity — the human organism could not utilize equine material. Later, human FSH was employed, but it failed, too — something else was needed.

About six years ago, Dr. Carl Gemzell, of the University of Uppsala, Sweden, devised a successful approach. He combined human FSH with human chorionic gonadotropin (HCG), another hormone, and induced pregnancies in a number of women who had not been ovulating.

Moreover, a number of multiple births appeared, and in a case of miscarriage Dr. Gemzell noted seven well-formed fetuses. The FSH-HCG treatment was the one given the Queens, New York, woman who delivered healthy quadruplets in 1963. Further research on these hormones, as well as on a synthetic ovulation-inducer known as clomiphene citrate, is now being conducted by several American researchers.

TECHNIQUES FROM SURGERY

Surgery, too, has played a considerable role in overcoming female infertility. In one condition the pituitary is functioning normally but ovulation is blocked by small cysts on an ovary. In some cases of this kind, success has been achieved through wedge-resection — a pie-shaped bit of ovarian tissue is removed. Often the slightly smaller ovary will then function normally.

When I Was A Boy

B. F. "Pappy" Blanton

As compiled by Ralph Gregory, Curator of the Mark Twain Shrine, Florida, from the writings of the founder of the Appeal, B. F. "Pappy" Blanton, in 1919-20. A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes. (Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

June 27, 1919

When I was a boy it was very common for women to have quilting on the same day the men had a house raising or log rolling. Then men would come in from all over the neighborhood and raise a barn or pile the logs while the women and girls did the quilting. At noon all sat down to a feast of good things made up of the best the land afforded. One never sees such a feast these days.

When I was a boy there was a big public sale in the neighborhood of the stuff belonging to a dead man's estate. The man farmed on a large scale and worked many slaves but when he died it was found that he was bankrupt. Fine country hams, as nice looking as you ever saw, bro't only 2 1/2 cents a pound while side meat was hard to sell at any price. Ge whiz, just think of hams, good ones, selling at that. Buy one now and it will cost you near to 50 cents a pound.

When I was a boy doctors usually bled their patients for almost every ailment to which flesh is heir. If a patient had typhoid or any other fever they would lance his arm and catch the blood in a wash pan. Times have changed since then. Now a doctor only bleeds a patient's pocket book.

When I was a boy a young fellow with a young wife saved his money until he had $30 in cash. He decided to buy up a bunch of calves with this surplus wealth one fall and actually bought thirteen of them and had $20 left. It proved to be a good investment for stock went up in price and the next spring he sold them and more than doubled his money. That $30 would not buy one calf now.

When I was a boy there was nothing but scrub cattle and hogs in the country but the horse stock was better. The hogs were regular razorbacks and were rarely fattened until they were from one to two years old. Away back there there was generally a big crop of acorns and nuts and hogs got as fat as you ask for without any corn, but I remember people said acorns made the lard too much like oil so many penned up their hogs and fed them on corn to make the lard better.

When I was a boy there was not a red fox or fox squirrel to be found in the country, both foxes and squirrels being gray. Now it is a rare thing to see a gray squirrel or a gray fox, all being red. I understand the red foxes were brought here from Kentucky and killed off the grays. How true this is I do not know.

When I was a boy good farm hands could be hired for $13 to $15 a month for the entire season, including harvest of all kinds. This included their board and washing. Now good farm hands are getting from $40 to $60 a month and do not have to work half as hard as men did in the long ago. You see men ride and do most of their work on the farm now.

When I was a boy I knew an old fellow named Elam Sterns. He got drunk as a lord mighty often and always wanted to climb a tree when in that condition. When climbing he was always saying, "My name is Elam, always behind." The boys had lots of fun with him. He was all right when sober and had been a drummer in the war of 1812. Guess he got to Heaven as he was always climbing up while living.

When I was a boy nearly all farm houses were built near a spring, as people evidently did not know anything about digging a cistern or well. At least they did not have a well in our neighborhood until I was 10 years old and that was at our home. Plenty of water was found at 16 feet. It was a wonder. We drew the water with a rope attached to a bucket.

When I was a boy coon hunting put more thrills in a boy than an airplane does now. Lord, what excitment there was when a tree was cut down and the coon jumped out, was grabbed by the dogs and the fight was on in earnest. Sometimes an old fashioned coon would whip two or three dogs. Boys now don't know what excitment is unless they have witnessed a real old-fashioned coon fight.

When I was a boy once or twice a year all men of military age met at some place to drill. This was a great day for everybody, old and young, white and black, as all went to these "muster" days. One of my uncles was a major and when he was dressed up in his uniform and on a fine horse I thought he was the greatest man in the world. I believe now that men of the proper age should be drilled just as they were then.

When I was a boy eggs sold 3¢ to 5¢ a dozen, and if a washing tub full of eggs had been taken to the average town it would have gutted the market and had some left unsold. There was no way to ship eggs to the cities as there is now. Now it is a common thing for any town to receive several thousand dozen eggs in a day.

When I was a boy I often wondered if I would ever be a man like my uncles, little dreaming of the struggles to come to me before I was as old as they. But time never stops and the whirligig of time has brought me to where I can almost see the end of earthly things, but I feel that I have done the best I could and have not the least ill will toward a living soul, yet at times I would I were a boy again,

When every day seemed two or three.
I fell asleep upon the floor
And dreamed of happy days to see.

'Pet' Among Gardeners

NEW YORK--The Venus Fly Trap, a remarkable carnivorous (meat-eating) plant, is fast becoming a favorite among America's indoor gardeners.

"The growing of this fascinating plant, once a rare horticultural curiosity originally found only in certain sandy swamps in North Carolina which recently became available to nearly everyone, is the latest fad among home gardeners," according to Lamar Little, head of horticultural activities of F. W. Woolworth Co., one of the world's largest outlets for live plants and garden accessories.

The Venus Fly Trap is becoming popular because it is so completely unique among house plants, Mr. Little said. He noted that Charles Darwin, the great naturalist, said the plant is "the most wonderful" in the world.

It is a small perennial herb, with a rosette of leaves and often small white flowers, which thrives under warm, moist conditions.

The leaf blade of the plant is constructed by nature so as to work like the teeth of a trap, with two halves, which when open are at an angle of about 50 degrees, snapping together and the marginal bristles --about 13 in number--interlocking like the teeth of a trap, Mr. Little explained.

This trap is sprung by sensitive hairs, like feelers, that line the inner surface of the leaf blade. When one of these hairs is touched twice, or two or more of them touched once by a small fly or hovering insect, the trap snaps shut in less than one-fourth of a second and the insect is caught.

Amazingly, if the insect is small or of little food value, it is allowed to escape and the trap opens to await another victim. Home gardeners are finding that the Venus Fly Trap thrives on small pieces of hamburger.

When the insect or meat has been trapped, the secretion of digestive enzymes starts and the food is digested and absorbed into the plant's circulatory system. This action takes about ten days, after which the leaf blade reopens to await the next morsel of food, Mr. Little explained.

Scientists know that the closing of the leaf blades is accompanied by minute electrical disturbances like those which occur in the muscles of man and animals, but they do not fully understand the process, the Woolworth expert noted.

"The Venus Fly Trap is nature's miracle -- and also nature's enigma," Mr. Little said. "Perhaps that is why it is becoming so popular," he concluded.

Johnny, an exceptionally gifted child, was doing poorly in the 4th grade. His teacher was convinced that his desire to be one of the boys was keeping him from showing his superior ability, so she asked the school psychologist to interview the boy.

At one point in the interview, the psychologist asked, "Who wrote the play, Hamlet?"

Johnny, tired of the interview, replied, "How should I know? Kids my age don't read Shakespeare!" — Edward Moorhead.

An unexploded cap of dynamite in a stump on which they were chopping caused serious misfortune to Ernest Byrumn, Hurley Riggs and Henry Ridge Monday afternoon while they were working on the Sikeston special road between Buckeye and Blodgett. The men, who are road workers, had set off several charges in the stump and after about an hour and a half went back to dig it out. As they chopped about the roots an axe evidently struck an exploded cap of dynamite.

A LION TO LOVE

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — "I think everyone should have a lion, they're so lovable," believes Mrs. David P. Relling, who practices what she preaches. Adalord, a 265-pound lion, is a family pet.

The two-year-old king of beasts has been rendered a bit more lovable by Dr. Relling, a veterinarian, who spent eight hours in surgery removing Adalord's teeth. His claws have also been clipped. The lion, which downs 12 pounds of canned cat and dog food daily, has been generally well accepted in the neighborhood, the Rellings report.

Market Dull Before Martin Warning

NEW YORK - William McChesney Martin has been linked in the public mind with the most recent break in stock market prices. But before the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board warned against overconfidence the current downturn in stock market prices was already two weeks old.

And even the brief upsurge that had brought the market to a peak May 14 had followed a long period of hesitation.

The fears Martin is credited with bringing to public attention have been discussed in market circles much of this year.

Some of the uncertainties have to do with the economy in general. How long can it continue to advance? And how steep the climb? Will it become overheated?

Other nagging doubts have to do with the stock market itself.

Prices of many issues have gone up faster than yields. Corporate dividends have risen, but not as fast as prices of some of the popular shares. This means that returns on dollars invested at today's market prices are smaller than a few months back. The yields also are smaller than obtainable from less glamorous but perhaps safer investments.

Corporate profits have set a record high this year. But the rise in profit margins that has marked the last two years shows signs of petering out.

All that Martin, head of the nation's central banking system, did was to voice doubts that others had been discussing privately. Some of the worries -- which he didn't stress --centered on the chances of the economy keeping up its amazing growth rate, and on whether the stock market might already have discounted the gains expectable in the months ahead.

The stock market has been having its own troubles. For the public these have been linked with the 900 mark in the Dow-Jones averages of 30 industrial stocks. When this index crossed the 900 mark Jan. 28 the popular phrase was "the magic 900." But the volatile index slipped well below that later before finally recovering to climb to 939 May 14.

Some , however, think that 900 may still hold some magic as a resistance point to downward trends. Others talk about the "magic 1,000" they expect the indicator to cross before the year is out.

If it does, Martin will be forgiven -- in Wall Street, if not in all sectors of Washington.

A small night light takes very little electricity, but one installed in the bathroom enables children, even the small ones, to go to the bathroom without getting you out of bed.

Youngsters like things of their very own. One way to encouage a small child to wash his face and hands is to provide a pint-size wash cloth and towel for the purpose. Cut the squares from toweling to suit the child's age. Sew around the edges to prevent fraying.

tiny particles in gasoline

What does the American FINAL/FILTER* really do? Automotive engineers know—they asked for it and American Oil Research developed it to stand between you and trouble. You see, all gasolines pick up tiny impurities in transit and in storage. These impurities, should they get in your gasoline tank, could clog up the fuel line filter and stop you cold. The American FINAL/FILTER stops harmful contaminants right at the pump nozzle. If you use your car on the job (and even if you don't), stay out of trouble—"fill 'er up filtered" with American Regular or American Super-Premium.

Phyllis Diller Broke Out Of Kitchen At 37

HOLLYWOOD -- Are you a discontented housewife? Then listen to the saga of Phyllis Diller, who broke out of the kitchen at age 37.

That was 10 years ago. Since then she has become a leading figure of show business, a laugh-getter who can draw a half-million dollars per year

"I was one of those life-of-the-party types," she explained during a brief stopover between engagements.

She felt no great urge to transform her comedic talent into cash. That incentive was thrust upon her. Phyllis and her husband, Sherwood Diller, were living in Alameda, Calif., with their five children and feeling the pinch of unsuccess.

She tried out for a job at San Francisco's Purple Onion and won it. But while other performers of the San Francisco school -- Kingston Trio, Mort Sahl, Smothers Brothers, etc. --found early success, Phyllis did not.

After five years of playing joints from coast to coast her unique style began to click with night clubs and television audiences. She comes onstage with outlandish garb and a frizz of white hair -- "It's actually nerve ends," -- and talks about housewifery, learning to drive and other catastrophies.

The Diller home is now in Webster Grove, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis. There husband Sherwood takes care of business matters and the children.

Phyllis was leaving for Florida to play a cosmetics tycoon in a movie. Her long-time goal is a television series so she could finally be united with her children, who range from 15 to 24. Maybe next year.

Genius Carl Reiner Denies He's a Genius

By JOAN CROSBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Carl Reiner would like to call a halt to what people are saying about him.

Those who work with the writer - producer - director - performer, and those who hope to, all say Reiner is a genius. He denies it vehemently.

"Look, I'm not a genius and I am 43 years old. If you're not a genius by 24, forget it, Charlie. I'm very good now. I want to be very, very good and maybe by the time I'm 50, very, very, very good. By the time you hit 55 to 60, you go back down to very good again and by 75, you get to be fair."

Between television seasons, Carl is working with Joe Stein (who wrote "Fiddler on the Roof") on the movie version of "Enter Laughing," the Broadway comedy based on Carl's novel with autobiographical touches.

"I wish I could play me in the movie. That would mean I would be 18 again. No, come to think of it, I don't want to be 18 again. I'd like to be 42 again. Last year was nice."

Carl hopes that he can convince both CBS and sponsors to run "60 block-buster" repeats of the Van Dyke series in prime evening time for the two seasons after the show goes off. He is also working on a new series, about a pair of disc jockeys, planned for telecasting in 1966-67, and already sold to one of Van Dyke's sponsors.

HAIR TODAY AND GAUNT TOMORROW: When Carl Reiner takes "his hair" out of the closet he changes automatically from writer—producer—director into an actor—but he still retains his inimitable sense of humor.

A happy man who is, too, touched with genius (a man who works closely with Reiner says he is one of the nicest people in show business), Carl says if he had his choice he would be one of two things: an opera singer or a baseball player.

"I lacked one big thing to be a baseball player. I couldn't throw strikes. I sing the same way, off-pitch, a little sharp and not quite in rhythm. I'm like the little tailor who said 'If I had Rockefeller's money, I'd be richer than Rockefeller, because I wouldn't give up the tailor shop!' If I could sing as good as Jolson, I'd be better than Jolson, because I could still write the Van Dyke show.

"The other day my wife, who has perfect pitch, said to me, 'You know, you took away one of my greatest pleasures when we got married.' I figured she was talking about dancing, since she likes to dance and I don't. But she said she was talking about singing harmony. So you see, life hasn't been all roses for her."

Next season will be the fifth and last for the consistently excellent Van Dyke Show. The decision to end the show while it is still at the peak in ratings and quality is a joint decision of Carl's, Dick's and Mary Tyler Moore's.

"We would have left after the third year if we thought the series was going on forever. I was going to leave in the third year and turn over the producing reins to someone else. But when we all got together and decided we would only stay on five years, I couldn't let it go."

The U.S. flag was first called the "Star-Spangled Banner" by Francis Scott Key in 1814, when he wrote the poem that became the national anthem. Another popular name for the flag, "Old Glory," originated later in the 1800's with William Driver, a sea captain from Salem, Mass. He first used the name for a flag some friends gave him when he took command of a ship.

States Act To Cut Toll

CHICAGO (AP) —State legislatures are counter-attacking in the nation's long and losing battle against highway accidents, which now kill an average of 125 Americans a day.

As more and more automobiles jam the highways, and the accident death rate climbs, legislatures are passing laws requiring seat belts, running rattletraps off the roads and reinforcing state highway patrols, an Associated Press survey showed today.

The National Safety Council said today there were 13,710 traffic deaths in the nation during the first four months this year, a two per cent increase over the same period last year.

Legislatures in Montana and North Dakota have approved bills requiring safety belts for front seats of all new cars, starting with the 1966 models.

Gov. Henry Bellmon signed a similar measure for Oklahoma.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York signed a bill to compel used-car dealers to install front seat belts in automobiles of 1963 and later models, beginning Jan. 1, 1967.

Nebraska's lawmakers prohibited drag racing on streets and public highways.

The Maryland Legislature made it a crime to operate a car in any intentionally "improper manner so as to cause skidding, spinning of wheels or excessive noise." It also banned the use of a flagman or timer in a race on a street or highway.

A bill designed to get mobile junk heaps off the roads was adopted in Maryland, which hasn't had compulsory auto inspection since the 1930s.

It provides: police, starting next month, can stop any auto they consider defective and order repairs. The drivers will have 10 days to comply. If not, they will lose their licenses. In addition, when used-car titles change hands after Jan. 1 the cars must meet standards to be set forth by the state commissioner of motor vehicles.

The Nevada Legislature approved legislation which forbids motor carriers to operate any vehicle that is found to be in unsafe condition.

Georgia lawmakers provided money for 40 additional state patrolmen and salary increases of about $50 a month in the next two-year period for 450 patrolmen.

A new Colorado law gives the automobile the same status as a gun as a deadly weapon. It provides 1 to 14 years in prison for causing a death with a car deliberately or through extreme recklessness, such as in drag racing. Injuries under similar circumstances can result in 1-to-5 year terms.

The minimum age for a driver's license was raised from 15 to 16 in Montana and from 16 to 17 in Utah except for those who pass an approved training course.

Indiana made all driver licenses probationary for persons under 21, subject to revocation by the Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

Russia Sends Second Rocket Toward Moon

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched a rocket toward the moon today in what appeared to be its second try in a month to make history's first soft landing on the lunar surface.

The Russians first tested their soft-landing system in Luna 5, which crashed on the moon May 12. But they said at the time that the flight had collected valuable data for further attempts.

Luna 6's launching appeared to be the next try at a soft lunar landing, a key step toward putting a man on the moon.

The announcement of the launch by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, made no mention of plans to test a landing system.

The original announcement of the Luna 5 launch did not mention such plans either. But later the Russians announced that an easy landing on the moon would be attempted. Previously they had waited until they had results and then said everything went according to plan.

Six Injured In Three Mishaps

Six persons were hurt in area traffic accidents yesterday including a pedestrian, who was critically injured.

Two were injured in a two-car collision Monday at 8:30 a.m. at the intersection of highway 60 and Route 114, one mile west of Morehouse.

Owen Dale Jones, 18, route one, Essex, driver of a 1961 Chevrolet, pulled out on Highway 60 and struck a 1962 Chevrolet driven by Elvis E. Bailey, 45, of Compton, Calif.

Jones received head and arm cuts and possible internal injuries. His brother, Jerry Jones, 15, was cut on the head, mouth and bruised. Both were taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

In an accident one and a half mile west of Portageville, Ira Anderson, 69, Portageville, struck a pedestrian, Silver Lee Walker, 16. Walker is in a critical condition in a Hayti hospital, suffering from a fractured pelvis and a double right arm fracture. The accident happened on a rural gravel road yesterday.

In a car-truck crash on Highway 61 yesterday near Marston at 2:15 p.m., three persons were injured when a 1962 Chevrolet pickup driven by Myrle Davis, 38, Marston, struck a 1961 Rambler driven by Verley McCord, 70, Marston. Mamie McCord, 56, a passenger in the McCord car was slightly injured, as was Matilda Stevenson, 76, who was bruised on the neck. The driver of the Rambler had chest injuries.

All injured were taken to the Hayti hospital.

Navy Asks To Boost Strength

WASHINGTON AP -- The Navy, taxed by the demands of the war in Viet Nam, has proposed boosting its strength by about 11,000 officers and men, it was learned today.

The Navy wants to do so by prolonging enlistments and active - duty tours of certain skilled and seasoned officers and men for perhaps six months, sources said.

There were strong indications that the Navy proposal was running into heavy weather at the top Defense Department level, where the final decision will be made.

The recommendation was submitted to Pentagon leaders as Secretary of the Navy Paul H. Nitze's appeal for voluntary extensions appeared to be a flop.

In the month since Nitze publicly appealed for Navy men to "make a personal contribution to meeting the present challenge," fewer than 100 officers and only about 200 enlisted men have agreed to stay in uniform three to six months beyond the expiration of their terms of service.

The Navy is about 6,000 short of its manpower goal of 674,115 officers and men.

Thus, to reach that goal and 11,000 more beyond, the Navy would have to freeze the enlistments and active-duty tours of about 17,000 skilled officers and men.

The additional people, sources said, would be used to bring U. S. fleet units in the Pacific up to full strength.

Flyers In Good Condition

ABOARD USS WASP - Astronauts James A. McDivitt and Edward H. White II endured their four-day flight with even less apparent physical difficulties than did some of the Mercury astronauts on much shorter missions, the physician in charge of manned space flight medicine said today.

Even so the physician, Dr. Charles A. Berry, notified Adm. William McCormick, recovery force commander, it probably will be necessary to keep the astronauts on the Wasp until Thursday morning.

At Houston, Tex., officials of the Manned Spacecraft Center said no decisions had been made on when the astronauts will leave the Wasp and return to Houston for a news conference.

Berry said the Gemini physicians were "tremendously optimistic" as to the implications for longer space missions of the future, from observations to date as to symptoms of ill effects on heart or blood vessel systems.

The symptoms have not been as marked as on the three-or - four - hour Mercury missions such as the one made in 1963 by Air Force Maj. L. Gordon Cooper, he said.

Predict Many Space Advances

He was looking to future U.S. man-in-space flights which will be launched on an accelerated schedule as a result of the success of astronauts James A. Divitt and Edward H. White II.

Gemini spacecraft will hook up with other satellites; the pilots will perform intricate maneuvers during trips up to two weeks; and men will walk and work outside their orbiting spacecraft for longer periods than the excursion made by White.

Then on to the moon—perhaps only three years from now— and man's greatest adventure.

Even as McDivitt and White were being hoisted from the Atlantic Ocean Monday after their four-day trip, the Titan 2 rocket for Gemini 5 was being erected at Cape Kennedy.

The crew will be veteran Astronaut L. Gordon Cooper Jr., whose 34-hour American space-flight record was shattered by Gemini 4, and rookie pilot Charles Conrad Jr. They have a late August date with the stars.

Cooper and Conrad are to stay in space for seven days, but space agency officials hinted they could be up for a longer time — based on preliminary data from Gemini 4.

Sewn in the lining of the coat, and untouched, were bills totaling $2,980.

Wilbur Smith while serving as Marine

Service Set For Train Victim

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. at the Murray Lane Baptist church for Wilbur Smith, 25 - year - old former Sikeston resident killed yesterday by a train at Fisk as he ran across a trestle.

The Rev. James Fitch, pastor of the Fellowship Baptist church, will officiate. Burial will be in the Garden of Memories cemetery with the Nunnelee Funeral Home in charge.

Smith had been working in St. Louis in a service station since he left Sikeston two months ago. Prior to moving to St. Louis he had lived in Sikeston 10 years. He attended the public schools through the ninth grade here.

He served in the Marine Corps in 1958 and 1959 in California as a private first class.

He was born in East Prairie May 15, 1940.

Senate Balks At Changes

JEFFERSON CITY AP --The Missouri Senate balked Monday at every suggestion to change its Appropriations Committee's budget figures.

Several were proposed, but the Senate seemed intent upon passing the measures and getting them into a conference committee as quickly as possible--without change.

In a three-hour session, most of the major money bills were passed.

The committee came up with a $356 million general revenue budget--about $6 million less than recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, but $4 million more than was approved by the House.

Sen. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, chairman, said it would leave the state about a $20 million cushion and still provide $10 million for an increase in state aid to schools.

An attempt to appropriate funds for residence centers operated by state colleges at Independence, Malden and West Plains were defeated. It called for an additional $263,000. The centers now are operated with local funds and student fees.

It was opposed as an unwise precedent and a threat to the state's junior college system. The centers were not authorized to begin with, opponents said.

Patterson led the assault in spite of what he called strong criticism from a newspaper in southeast Missouri. He said the proposal was unrealistic and that the state could not provide every student with higher education "within yelling distance of their homes."

CHEESEY STORY

TACOMA, Wash. (AP)--When five-year old Ruth Ann Reha hurt her leg in a bicycle accident and was taken to her family doctor, he told her he would take an X-ray of the leg and then put on a dressing. Said Ruth Ann: "I like roquefort."

Vote On Bonds In July

A special city bond election, asking for a 29 cent increase in the tax levy, will be held during the week of July 26-30, it was announced at last night's city council meeting.

The levy would result from a $1,200,000 sewer and water improvement proposal.

It was announced that the park board has put a ruling into affect that only boys in the Sikeston public schools would be allowed to use the ball parks in summer league baseball beginning 1966.

City Manager Raymert Miller announced that during Clean Up Week there were approximately 150 loads of trash taken from peoples homes.

He also announced that during the last year there has been three miles of sidewalk either repaired or built. He predicts more will be built or repaired next year.

Miller said that 8,768 vehicles used the city dump during the last year. This is one vehicle every 15 minutes in a six-day week.

Five ordinances were put into effect for paving of streets. Those to be paved are Selma from Matthews to Kathleen; North West from Compress Road to a point 505 feet north; Pine from Courtney Drive to Virginia; Daniel from School to Delmar; and Petroleum from Kentucky road to Indiana and Indiana from Missouri to Petroleum.

The W. S. McMullin Construction Company had two bids accepted. On Selma Street the bid was $4.60 per lineal foot and on Northwest Street the bid was $5.50 per lineal foot.

There were three petitions for the paving of streets. Those petitioned to be paved are Selma from Kathleen to Henry; Miller Drive from Indiana to termination; and Indiana from Missouri to Broadway.

Cape State Gets Grant

WASHINGTON (AP)—Grants and loans totaling $39,406,679 to 75 colleges and universities for new construction were announced today by the Office of Education.

The funds were provided under the higher education facilities act authorizing help for public and private nonprofit colleges and universities in building or remodeling classrooms, laboratories and libraries.

Grants: Southeast Missouri State College, Cape Girardeau, $51,556, language.

Bloomfield To Drill New Well

BLOOMFIELD — Drilling on a new water well here is expected to begin soon, a city official said.

Wednesday the 40-year-old well used to provide the city with water began pumping out sand and slate. Experts concurred that the casing at the well's bottom had eroded away and that, because of its age, the well should be abandoned.

Until the drilling can be completed, an auxiliary well will be used. Attempts will be made to rejuvenate another well, closed eight years ago after sediment clogged its pump.

Rogers Named Principal

MORLEY --Dolan F. Rogers has been elected principal of Scott Central high school for 1965-66. He will begin his new duties Aug. 2, according to Scott Central Supt. Roy W. Ragains.

Roger's teaching experience is spread over 15 years of which 13 have been in Missouri.

For the past six years, he has been coordinator of distributive education and director of adult education in the Sikeston school system.

Assessment Ratio Hiked

BLOOMFIELD -- Real estate assessments in Stoddard county will be at the ratio of 30.4 per cent of true value, State Rep. Tom Baker reported today. This is an increase from the present ratio of 20.47 per cent.

Baker said that Judge Hunter Phillips, chairman of the state tax commission in Jefferson City, has accepted information given him on real estate transactions in Stoddard county, which makes the new assessment ratio possible. Phillips said that the commission would act on the increase proposal before the end of June.

The new figure will be certified to the commissioner of education within 10 days and qualify the county for $60,000 additional school foundation aid, Baker said.

He estimated that the additional money provided by Missouri House bill 33 plus the $60,000 would provide $200,000 more for schools in the county beginning next September without any tax increase.

GAS WARFARE

TAVARES, Fla. (AP) —Lake Country Sheriff Willis McCall has received three complaints of bee hives being gassed.

The sheriff's office suspects a beekeepers' feud. Since the beekeepers' involved have leases or permissions from the owners to use the orange groves, the sheriff's office thinks that other beekeepers may resent bees other than their own using the available pollen.

Those responsible for the bee gassing can be held liable for presecution for trespass and malicious destruction of private property and possibly even for "entering a grove at night with intent to commit an illegal act," a felony under Florida statutes punishable by imprisonment from two to 10 years.

Plan July Vote On City Water-Sewer Bond Issue

Projected growth of Sikeston would give the city 20,000 population in 1970, Charles Simpson, business manager of the board of public works, said last night.

"The city's location on two railroads and two interstate highways interests industry," he told the Rotary club at the Holiday Inn.

Simpson made one of a series of speeches in behalf of a proposed $1,200,000 bond issue for water and sewer improvements. He said that it is planned to hold the election the last week in July. The improvements are needed, he said, because of the city's growth.

A total of $600,000 would be earmarked for water projects, installation of larger mains and construction of new storage tanks to improve the flow of water to outlying areas of the city. This improvement would be financed by revenue bonds and would result "in not more than a five per cent increase in average residential water bills," the speaker said. Because of low water pressure two fires in the outer perimeter of the city at the same time could create a hazard. The present plant is of 3-million gallon capacity and a peak of 2,800,000 gallons have been used on a summer day.

Funds would be set aside for expansion of both water and sewer trunk lines when they become needed in new growth residential and industrial areas of the city.

To finance improvements in the sewage system $600,000 in general obligation bonds would be issued, necessitating an annual increase of 29 cents on each $100 valuation of property tax for five years in Sikeston, where the tax rate is now $1.55.

Simpson said that the proposed improvements should satisfy the city's growth requirements for 15 years.

Years Of Conflict End In Prison Term For Twin

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Years of conflict that resulted in death for wealthy Todd Nicholson have ended in a prison term for his twin brother, Timothy.

Timothy faces one to 10 years in prison. He is not eligible for probation, but could be paroled after about 18 months. A jury of seven men and five women reached the verdict after deliberating two days.

The emotion-charged trial—spread over five and one-half weeks — produced testimony of violent rages, protestations of self-defense and charges of falsehood.

Witnesses for the defense testified Todd possessed an explosive, almost psychotic, temper, often aimed at Timothy. They also said Todd had taken out a $1-million insurance policy on Timothy's life, then presented himself as Timothy for the physical examination. The twins' mother, Roberta Nicholson, confirmed this on the witness stand.

The twins, heirs to the Cudahy meat - packing and Pullman sleeping - car fortunes, had pooled their efforts in profitable real estate investments, mostly through the Sun Development Co. of Phoenix, Ariz.

Superior Court Judge H. Burton Noble set July 9 for sentencing.

States Act To Cut Toll

CHICAGO (AP) —State legislatures are counter-attacking in the nation's long and losing battle against highway accidents, which now kill an average of 125 Americans a day.

As more and more automobiles jam the highways, and the accident death rate climbs, legislatures are passing laws requiring seat belts, running rattletraps off the roads and reinforcing state highway patrols, an Associated Press survey showed today.

The National Safety Council said today there were 13,710 traffic deaths in the nation during the first four months this year, a two per cent increase over the same period last year.

Legislatures in Montana and North Dakota have approved bills requiring safety belts for front seats of all new cars, starting with the 1966 models.

Gov. Henry Bellmon signed a similar measure for Oklahoma.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York signed a bill to compel used-car dealers to install front seat belts in automobiles of 1963 and later models, beginning Jan. 1, 1967.

Nebraska's lawmakers prohibited drag racing on streets and public highways.

The Maryland Legislature made it a crime to operate a car in any intentionally "improper manner so as to cause skidding, spinning of wheels or excessive noise." It also banned the use of a flagman or timer in a race on a street or highway.

A bill designed to get mobile junk heaps off the roads was adopted in Maryland, which hasn't had compulsory auto inspection since the 1930s.

It provides: police, starting next month, can stop any auto they consider defective and order repairs. The drivers will have 10 days to comply. If not, they will lose their licenses. In addition, when used-car titles change hands after Jan. 1 the cars must meet standards to be set forth by the state commissioner of motor vehicles.

The Nevada Legislature approved legislation which forbids motor carriers to operate any vehicle that is found to be in unsafe condition.

Georgia lawmakers provided money for 40 additional state patrolmen and salary increases of about $50 a month in the next two-year period for 450 patrolmen.

A new Colorado law gives the automobile the same status as a gun as a deadly weapon. It provides 1 to 14 years in prison for causing a death with a car deliberately or through extreme recklessness, such as in drag racing. Injuries under similar circumstances can result in 1- to-5 year terms.

The minimum age for a driver's license was raised from 15 to 16 in Montana and from 16 to 17 in Utah except for those who pass an approved training course.

Indiana made all driver licenses probationary for persons under 21, subject to revocation by the Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

Russia Sends Second Rocket Toward Moon

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union launched a rocket toward the moon today in what appeared to be its second try in a month to make history's first soft landing on the lunar surface.

The Russians first tested their soft-landing system in Luna 5, which crashed on the moon May 12. But they said at the time that the flight had collected valuable data for further attempts.

Luna 6's launching appeared to be the next try at a soft lunar landing, a key step toward putting a man on the moon.

The announcement of the launch by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, made no mention of plans to test a landing system.

The original announcement of the Luna 5 launch did not mention such plans either. But later the Russians announced that an easy landing on the moon would be attempted. Previously they had waited until they had results and then said everything went according to plan.

Flyers In Good Condition

ABOARD USS WASP - Astronauts James A. McDivitt and Edward H. White II endured their four-day flight with even less apparent physical difficulties than did some of the Mercury astronauts on much shorter missions, the physician in charge of manned space flight medicine said today.

Even so the physician, Dr. Charles A. Berry, notified Adm. William McCormick, recovery force commander, it probably will be necessary to keep the astronauts on the Wasp until Thursday morning.

At Houston, Tex., officials of the Manned Spacecraft Center said no decisions had been made on when the astronauts will leave the Wasp and return to Houston for a news conference.

Berry said the Gemini physicians were "tremendously optimistic" as to the implications for longer space missions of the future, from observations to date as to symptoms of ill effects on heart or blood vessel systems.

The symptoms have not been as marked as on the three- or - four - hour Mercury missions such as the one made in 1963 by Air Force Maj. L. Gordon Cooper, he said.

Vote On Bonds In July

A special city bond election, asking for a 29 cent increase in the tax levy, will be held during the week of July 26-30, it was announced at last night's city council meeting.

The levy would result from a $1,200,000 sewer and water improvement proposal.

It was announced that the park board has put a ruling into affect that only boys in the Sikeston public schools would be allowed to use the ball parks in summer league baseball beginning 1966.

City Manager Raymert Miller announced that during Clean Up Week there were approximately 150 loads of trash taken from peoples homes.

He also announced that during the last year there has been three miles of sidewalk either repaired or built. He predicts more will be built or repaired next year.

Miller said that 8,768 vehicles used the city dump during the last year. This is one vehicle every 15 minutes in a six-day week.

Five ordinances were put into effect for paving of streets. Those to be paved are Selma from Matthews to Kathleen; North West from Compress Road to a point 505 feet north; Pine from Courtney Drive to Virginia; Daniel from School to Delmar; and Petroleum from Kentucky road to Indiana and Indiana from Missouri to Petroleum.

The W. S. McMullin Construction Company had two bids accepted. On Selma Street the bid was $4.60 per lineal foot and on Northwest Street the bid was $5.50 per lineal foot.

There were three petitions for the paving of streets. Those petitioned to be paved are Selma from Kathleen to Henry; Miller Drive from Indiana to termination; and Indiana from Missouri to Broadway.

Assessment Ratio Hiked

BLOOMFIELD -- Real estate assessments in Stoddard county will be at the ratio of 30.4 per cent of true value, State Rep. Tom Baker reported today. This is an increase from the present ratio of 20.47 per cent.

Baker said that Judge Hunter Phillips, chairman of the state tax commission in Jefferson City, has accepted information given him on real estate transactions in Stoddard county, which makes the new assessment ratio possible. Phillips said that the commission would act on the increase proposal before the end of June.

The new figure will be certified to the commissioner of education within 10 days and qualify the county for $60,000 additional school foundation aid, Baker said.

He estimated that the additional money provided by Missouri House bill 33 plus the $60,000 would provide $200,000 more for schools in the county beginning next September without any tax increase.

Six Injured In Three Mishaps

Six persons were hurt in area traffic accidents yesterday including a pedestrian, who was critically injured.

Two were injured in a two-car collision Monday at 8:30 a.m. at the intersection of highway 60 and Route 114, one mile west of Morehouse.

Owen Dale Jones, 18, route one, Essex, driver of a 1961 Chevrolet, pulled out on Highway 60 and struck a 1962 Chevrolet driven by Elvis E. Bailey, 45, of Compton, Calif.

Jones received head and arm cuts and possible internal injuries. His brother, Jerry Jones, 15, was cut on the head, mouth and bruised. Both were taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

In an accident one and a half mile west of Portageville, Ira Anderson, 69, Portageville, struck a pedestrian, Silver Lee Walker, 16. Walker is in a critical condition in a Hayti hospital, suffering from a fractured pelvis and a double right arm fracture. The accident happened on a rural gravel road yesterday.

In a car-truck crash on Highway 61 yesterday near Marston at 2:15 p.m., three persons were injured when a 1962 Chevrolet pickup driven by Myrle Davis, 38, Marston, struck a 1961 Rambler driven by Verley McCord, 70, Marston. Navy Asks To Boost Strength

WASHINGTON AP -- The Navy, taxed by the demands of the war in Viet Nam, has proposed boosting its strength by about 11,000 officers and men, it was learned today.

The Navy wants to do so by prolonging enlistments and active - duty tours of certain skilled and seasoned officers and men for perhaps six months, sources said.

There were strong indications that the Navy proposal was running into heavy weather at the top Defense Department level, where the final decision will be made.

The recommendation was submitted to Pentagon leaders as Secretary of the Navy Paul H. Nitze's appeal for voluntary extensions appeared to be a flop.

In the month since Nitze publicly appealed for Navy men to "make a personal contribution to meeting the present challenge," fewer than 100 officers and only about 200 enlisted men have agreed to stay in uniform three to six months beyond the expiration of their terms of service.

The Navy is about 6,000 short of its manpower goal of 674,115 officers and men.

Thus, to reach that goal and 11,000 more beyond, the Navy would have to freeze the enlistments and active-duty tours of about 17,000 skilled officers and men.

The additional people, sources said, would be used to bring U. S. fleet units in the Pacific up to full strength.

Predict Many Space Advances

He was looking to future U.S. man-in-space flights which will be launched on an accelerated schedule as a result of the success of astronauts James A. Divitt and Edward H. White II.

Gemini spacecraft will hook up with other satellites; the pilots will perform intricate maneuvers during trips up to two weeks; and men will walk and work outside their orbiting spacecraft for longer periods than the excursion made by White.

Then on to the moon—perhaps only three years from now— and man's greatest adventure.

Even as McDivitt and White were being hoisted from the Atlantic Ocean Monday after their four-day trip, the Titan 2 rocket for Gemini 5 was being erected at Cape Kennedy.

The crew will be veteran Astronaut L. Gordon Cooper Jr., whose 34-hour American spaceflight record was shattered by Gemini 4, and rookie pilot Charles Conrad Jr. They have a late August date with the stars.

Cooper and Conrad are to stay in space for seven days, but space agency officials hinted they could be up for a longer time — based on preliminary data from Gemini 4.

EXPENSIVE RIDE--ALMOST

BOSTON, Mass. (AP)--Natalie Coelho, in her 70s, appeared a bit upset at the Essex subway station here and asked train starter Henry McCuster if he would take her back to the Dover station where she boarded the train. She said she had misplaced her coat. The two of them found the coat draped over a turnstile where it had been hanging for some time. Sewn in the lining of the coat, and untouched, were bills totaling $2,980.

Service Set For Train Victim

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 p.m. at the Murray Lane Baptist church for Wilbur Smith, 25 - year - old former Sikeston resident killed yesterday by a train at Fisk as he ran across a trestle.

The Rev. James Fitch, pastor of the Fellowship Baptist church, will officiate. Burial will be in the Garden of Memories cemetery with the Nunnelee Funeral Home in charge.

Smith had been working in St. Louis in a service station since he left Sikeston two months ago. Prior to moving to St. Louis he had lived in Sikeston 10 years. He attended the public schools through the ninth grade here.

He served in the Marine Corps in 1958 and 1959 in California as a private first class.

He was born in East Prairie May 15, 1940.

Senate Balks At Changes

JEFFERSON CITY AP --The Missouri Senate balked Monday at every suggestion to change its Appropriations Committee's budget figures.

Several were proposed, but the Senate seemed intent upon passing the measures and getting them into a conference committee as quickly as possible--without change.

In a three-hour session, most of the major money bills were passed.

The committee came up with a $356 million general revenue budget--about $6 million less than recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, but $4 million more than was approved by the House.

Sen. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, chairman, said it would leave the state about a $20 million cushion and still provide $10 million for an increase in state aid to schools.

An attempt to appropriate funds for residence centers operated by state colleges at Independence, Malden and West Plains were defeated. It called for an additional $263,000. The centers now are operated with local funds and student fees.

It was opposed as an unwise precedent and a threat to the state's junior college system. The centers were not authorized to begin with, opponents said.

Patterson led the assault in spite of what he called strong criticism from a newspaper in southeast Missouri. He said the proposal was unrealistic and that the state could not provide every student with higher education "within yelling distance of their homes."

CHEESEY STORY

Bloomfield To Drill New Well

BLOOMFIELD — Drilling on a new water well here is expected to begin soon, a city official said.

Wednesday the 40-year-old well used to provide the city with water began pumping out sand and slate. Experts concurred that the casing at the well's bottom had eroded away and that, because of its age, the well should be abandoned.

Until the drilling can be completed, an auxiliary well will be used. Attempts will be made to rejuvenate another well, closed eight years ago after sediment clogged its pump.

Plan July Vote On City Water-Sewer Bond Issue

Projected growth of Sikeston would give the city 20,000 population in 1970, Charles Simpson, business manager of the board of public works, said last night.

"The city's location on two railroads and two interstate highways interests industry," he told the Rotary club at the Holiday Inn.

Simpson made one of a series of speeches in behalf of a proposed $1,200,000 bond issue for water and sewer improvements. He said that it is planned to hold the election the last week in July. The improvements are needed, he said, because of the city's growth.

A total of $600,000 would be earmarked for water projects, installation of larger mains and construction of new storage tanks to improve the flow of water to outlying areas of the city. This improvement would be financed by revenue bonds and would result "in not more than a five per cent increase in average residential water bills," the speaker said. Because of low water pressure two fires in the outer perimeter of the city at the same time could create a hazard. The present plant is of 3-million gallon capacity and a peak of 2,800,000 gallons have been used on a summer day.

Funds would be set aside for expansion of both water and sewer trunk lines when they become needed in new growth residential and industrial areas of the city.

To finance improvements in the sewage system $600,000 in general obligation bonds would be issued, necessitating an annual increase of 29 cents on each $100 valuation of property tax for five years in Sikeston, where the tax rate is now $1.55.

Simpson said that the proposed improvements should satisfy the city's growth requirements for 15 years.

Years Of Conflict End In Prison Term For Twin

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Years of conflict that resulted in death for wealthy Todd Nicholson have ended in a prison term for his twin brother, Timothy.

Timothy faces one to 10 years in prison. He is not eligible for probation, but could be paroled after about 18 months. A jury of seven men and five women reached the verdict after deliberating two days.

The emotion-charged trial — spread over five and one-half weeks — produced testimony of violent rages, protestations of self-defense and charges of falsehood.

Witnesses for the defense testified Todd possessed an explosive, almost psychotic, temper, often aimed at Timothy. They also said Todd had taken out a $1-million insurance policy on Timothy's life, then presented himself as Timothy for the physical examination. The twins' mother, Roberta Nicholson, confirmed this on the witness stand.

The twins, heirs to the Cudahy meat - packing and Pullman sleeping - car fortunes, had pooled their efforts in profitable real estate investments, mostly through the Sun Development Co. of Phoenix, Ariz.

Superior Court Judge H. Burton Noble set July 9 for sentencing.

If all Commencement speeches were laid end to end it is safe to predict that the world would no longer remember what was said there.

Anyone who fancies that he is mature and almost everyone does, can think a moment and come up with what he believes is good advice for the graduates -- pure nuggets of gold, as it were.

Much solid advice has been delivered to graduates through the years by older men, who sincerely believed that they had an important message to relate to the young, even a mission to do it.

But who can remember what any of them said? The answer is no one. The advice has been ignored, however politely.

Most of the speeches, full of cliches and homelies, haven't even made decent reading in the newspaper accounts about them.

The graduates themselves are too self conscious in their caps and gowns (some of them itch), too concerned about their personal appearance when the spotlight shines on them, too occupied with thinking about a boy friend or girl friend in the class, too happy to be getting out of school or occupied by other diversionary thoughts to listen to an old buzzard tell how he acquired a big bag of sheckles or achieved another form of success.

Sikeston high school has recognized the futility of this type of ceremonial expounding of thread bare themes by unattractive old codgers. The false teeth have ceased rattling there.

A few of the outstanding members of the class in Sikeston give short speeches. No, what they say won't be remembered but most of the class probably will at least remember who said it. At least that's a reasonable hope.

MESSAGE TO MR. WIRTZ

A Cabinet member is presumed to be a public servant, a steward of the public interest. Scratch that presumption.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has just reminded us that he is a lackey of the bosses of organized labor.

The voice of the parrot was heard in the land on Monday. That was when Secretary Wirtz went before the House labor subcommittee to advocate repeal of Section 14 (b) of the Taft - Hartley Act, a move which could abolish voluntary union membership anywhere in America.

The union chiefs decreed that "right-to-work" laws -- now prevailing in 19 states, including Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi -- should be abolished at the Federal level. The Democratic Party incorporated this dogma of the union bosses in the 1964 platform. President Johnson has heeled to the master's command, and obedient Willard Wirtz does the same.

But what union commanders say does not reflect public opinion.

The public says otherwise.

Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N. J., conducted nationwide survey on the right-to-work issue last year. It found that 67 per cent of the American people support the idea of voluntary union membership. Nineteen states have laws that conform with that consensus.

Right-to-work laws do not outlaw unions. They do not discourage union membership. They don't prevent recruiting. They simply prevent the union shop, which forces employes to join a union even if they prefer not to.

Secretary Wirtz' hoop-jumping at the command of organized labor is not altogether surprising. Just two years ago he was arm - twisting in behalf of a $100-a-plate dinner for Senator Harrison A. Williams, Jr. (D-N.J.), an apostle in labor's drive to repeal 14 (b).

It is obvious that Secretary Wirtz has not examined his testimony closely. He is wrong when he says that the supporters of 14 (b) are "virtually all businessmen." The National Right To Work Committee is headed by S. D. Cadwallader, a member of the Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen. We receive communications from union men who do not want 14 (b) repealed -- not because they oppose union but because they fear union despots.

Many good union members insist upon the right to throw out would-be racketeers. A large proportion of workers would prefer to work in a chosen job without being forced into a union.

Had Mr. Wirtz glanced over his shoulder he might have seen a great many farmers who also object strongly to the power politics of big organized labor.

Secretary Wirtz should be reminded of the job permit scandals of the World War II period, which occasionally crop up today, particularly in defense industries. He also should remember the union-agent racketeers who have made entry into a trade impossible for those they don't want. He should heed the words of Representative Phillip M. Landrum (D., Ga.) , co-author of the Landrum-Griffin Act and an expert on labor and management, who has said:

"When a person is forced to join, forced to pay dues and at the same time denied a voice in union affairs, then what effective checkrein is there on a union officer? Or what effective checkrein is there on the racketeer who takes over a union? Or what effective checkrein is there on the employer who is willing to enter into a dishonest arrangement with a dishonest unin officer or with a racketeer?"

Repeal of Section 14 (b) is an open door to all these evils. That is reason enough to condemn the political pressure which has forced the current Administration to bow to politicking union bosses.

But the crux of the issue has been ignored by organized labor. In every one of the 19 states with right-to-work laws, the voting public could bring about repeal if it so desired. The Taft-Hartley Act does not insist on the right-to-work laws -- it simply permits it where it is wanted by the people. So long as 14 (b) remains in the Federal law, the voters of any state can take either position -- for or against the union shop.

If 14 (b) is repealed, a labor minority can exert a dictatorial power over both workers and businesses in states where the public majority prefers its right to work.

The union lords have not proved their case. They have used the vise of bloc vote control. Therefore, the voters of individual states should have a voice in the kind of labor laws they want. If but one state wanted 14 (b) to remain intact, it should be heard.

There are, in fact, 19 such states. Two-thirds of the American people want 14 (b). They also speak to Secretary Wirtz. Commercial Appeal

THE EGGHEAD EXPLOSION

It is better to learn late than never. - Publilius Syrus

"NEVER IN HISTORY has it been so materially comfortable to be an egghead." The speaker is an anonymous University of Pennsylvania graduate student with a full-expense fellowship in biology. He speaks for the brighter segment of his generation. A few specifics:

The 1936 class of Dartmouth College, as reported in a scientific sampling 25 years later, sent 45 per cent of its graduates on to further study. If present trends hold up, 80 per cent or more of the 1966 graduating class will become candidates for graduate degrees.

Schools such as Princeton, Harvard, Cornell, University of Pennsylvania, and New York University last September sent 60 to 85 per cent of their 1964 liberal arts men into full-time graduate study. (Comparatively few women take graduate school courses, except teaching candidates.).

Of the nation's 450,000 bachelor degree graduates of last June, 100,000 are now working for higher degrees, according to a survey by the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company. More than 90,000 master's degrees were conferred in 1964, as well as 13,000 philosophy doctorates. Each year sees a rise in the number of advanced degrees of between 6 and 7 per cent. Thus the total of graduate degrees awarded this month will be in the order of 110,000.

College and universities are expanding their efforts to supply direly needed candidates for doctorates. Tulane is introducing a program that will give outstanding students up to $8,200 in aid to help them earn doctorates in four years. Harvard picks 25 of its best and brightest and gives them free tuition and up to $2000 a year for five years.

IN THE CICERONIAN SENSE of cultivating a fertile mind with learning all this sounds ideally delightful. But there is another side to the coin. Nobody questions the need for graduate study for scientific and technological pursuits. But placement officers responding to the insurance company survey cited above complained that the "chase after higher degrees is becoming indiscriminate and overdone, especially in non-technical areas." A spokesman for Princeton noted that "a considerable number " of students chose graduate school because of "procrastination, lack of career information, draft apprehension, vocational immaturity, and liberal graduate fellowships."

Placement officers also are beginning to sniff an anti-business attitude on campuses that could become serious. Harvard last year sent 31 graduates to the Peace Corps, only nine fewer than it fielded for business. An age group that resents the conformism its older brothers and sisters sedulously aped fears getting caught in the pin-striped, button - down-collar labyrinth. "We are deeply concerned with the number of college youths who have rejected business as a career," says John E. Harmon, director of manpower development, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

THE COLLEGE CRUSH of the past few years has pushed up to the graduate level, without reducing any of the pressure from below. Enrollment of students aiming to advanced degrees was up about 12 per cent in land-grant institutions this year.

A great many institutions are turning to an 11 or 12 month operation. Year-round higher education would create badly needed space for 1.2 million students.

A further answer would be tightening requirements for admission to graduate schools. Standards are being raised, of course, but only effectively at institutions where standards always have been discriminatingly high.

Undoubtedly reflecting their growing disenchantment with the aid extended by the 1964 income tax cut, the nation's independent business proprietors have registered their highest approval yet of the "plow back" tax reform.

In a nationwide balloting on H. R. 2593, introduced by Rep. Charles Chamberlain (Mich.) the independent businessmen voted in favor by a majority of 82%, with 15% opposed and 3% undecided.

This bill, which would permit businessmen to deduct from taxes up to 20% of a year's earnings to a maximum of $30-000 to reinvest in plant inventory and accounts receivable, was introduced in the last session of Congress by Rep. Chamberlain, and supported at that time by 73% of the independent businessmen.

In 1962 when they voted on the same measure, which had been introduced by Sen. John Sparkman (Ala.) and co-sponsored by 24 other senators, including the entire membership of the Senate Small Business Committee, 80% were in favor. In 1959, when the same measure was introduced by Rep. Tom Steed (Okla.) a majority of 72% favored it.

In the present session Rep. Abraham Multer (New York) has two bills introduced which would achieve the same purpose, but for the survey the Chamberlain bill was presented to the nation's independent business proprietors.

The independent business proprietors also think that the enactment of the "plow back" allowance is the most important single action that could be taken to promote expansion and new job opportunities. This is reflected in a separate year long continuous survey being conducted by the Federation, which shows over 80% of the respondents to date favor this move when asked what measures could be taken to accelerate expansion.

The decision of the Organization of American States to send an inter-American peace -keeping force to the Dominican Republic is a long step toward building that organization into something more than a debating society.

Although five of the largest nations -- Chile, Ecuador, Mexico, Peru and Uruguay -- voted against the proposal and Venezuela abstained, and although it is more an emergency prescription against the symptoms than the causes of the political sickness racking the Dominican Republic, it sets a far-reaching precedent.

If the United States can no longer employ the gunboat diplomacy of the 19th century and lomacy of the 19th century and act as the hemisphere's policeman, as our sister republics repeatedly tell us, then the only alternative is for them to accept the fact that the responsibility for what goes on in the hemisphere belongs to all of them.

At the least, the inter-American police will hold a lid on the blood shed in the Dominican Republic and allow the United States to withdraw its troops, or some of them, to where they will be safe from snipers -- both those who fire bullets and those who issue white papers.

But it is to be hoped that the peacekeeping force will accomplish much more than the least -- that it will give the democratic process another chance in the Dominican Republic so that its people may eventually establish a stable, free and progressive government of their own choosing.

It is possible that there could be more success in peaceful negotiating of problems in Asia and Latin America if there were a stronger feeling that the American leadership is sincere in desiring freedom.

This statement by C. Wilson Harder, president of the National Federation of Independent Business, is made in connection with the proposal to eliminate Section 14b of the Taft - Hartley Act, which permits states to enact "right to work" laws.

He said that the proposal to deliver all workers to the domination of labor leaders is quite a cynical reflection on the integrity of the American system, and is bound to have an effect on all nations of the world.

"There is the Biblical injunction," he points out, "that before removing the mote from thy neighbor's eye, thou should first cast out the beam from thine own. Thus, those who oppose the American espousal of freedom no doubt wonder how the American leadership can take a position for freedom for others, while seeking bondage for its own people."

PROPAGANDA'S VICTIMS

Eighty percent of the American people are opposed to Communism. Because Communism hides behind many false masks, it is difficult to oppose this menace without the opposers' motives being impugned.

A person who speaks out against Communism will most likely be branded anit-Catholic, anti - Protestant, anit-Semitic, anti-Negro, or anti-Labor, or labeled with such other epithets as "dangerous right-winger" and "extremist." Whether such labels can be permanently pinned on a citizen whose fault is defense of his country against a mortal enemy depends on the public's attitude.

Public acceptance of smear attacks will assure continuation of these injustices, for the public will be told anything it is willing to accept or will tolerate.

A few citizens bear the brunt of these attacks for their anti-Communist activities because they carry most of the load. If more of our citizenry participated in defending our system of government from Communist subversion, there would be no small embattled faction bearing "active anti-Communist" labels against whom leftists could arouse public opinion.

One recent victim of such agitation has been President Johnson for his stand against Communism in Southeast Asia and Latin America. Nettled at the panic of his advisers in the face of leftist criticism, he complained, "You guys are so busy saving my face, you're going to lose me my pants!"

If everyone devoted ten minutes or more daily before falling asleep at night to opposing Communism, certainly Communism would become less menacing and probably fade away. "Ten minutes each day" for two-thirds of the adult population would amount to 20 million hours daily, and Communism cannot survive that much opposition. HLH

He is Lt. George M. Sheldon, Olumpia, Wash., a former naval combat flier who flew 71 missions in Korea off the carrier Philippine Sea. He also holds five Air Medals and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The chaplain, who served 13 years as a line officer in the Navy after graduating from Annapolis, is highly popular with the nearly 600 members of Mobile Construction Battalion 10.

As one of the Seabees said: "We do hard, sweaty work from 12 to 18 hours a day. When we have a problem, we need someone to talk to who can talk our language. The padre can."

Chaplain Sheldon is 6 foot 1, has hazel eyes, closecropped, iron-gray hair and a Lincolnesque countenance. He wears a gold cross on his shirt and a big colorful Vietnamese jungle hat that makes him easily identifiable from a distance.

"A variety of things led me to the ministry," he said. "When I joined the Episcopal Church in 1955, I made a commitment to Christ and his Church. I began to read the Bible as a coherent whole rather than as bits and piecemeal. Gradually I came to the conviction that this was the work I should follow."

He resigned from active naval duty in 1959 to enter the Divinity School of the Pacific at Berkeley, Calif. After graduating in 1962, he served in parishes in the San Francisco Bay area and Salt Lake City before rejoining the Navy.

The padre works as hard as any Seabee himself. He holds six religious services weekly for the Seabees and Marines, helps in the Military's people-to- people program, and is active in the direction of a native orphanage. But his greatest satisfaction comes from the endless hours of counseling men who come to him for help - Protestants, Catholics and Jews alike.

"They are typical of the problems of men away from home -- loneliness, financial difficulties, and worries over the stability of their marriage," he said, "Occasionally, there is a man who doesn't adjust well to military life and believes he is being picked on.

"Our biggest problems result from communications failures --when men don't get letters from home regularly or don't write home regularly themselves.

"Mail is the greatest morale builder. The simple words "I love you" are still the most important in the world."

Chaplain Sheldon, whose wife and two children live in Oxnard, Calif., hasn't flown an airplane for nine years, still hankers to now and then.

"But I like this work better," he said. "The thrill of flying is essentially selfish and can be shared only with other people in the same game. But any kind of ministry -- whether it be preaching, teaching, nursing or healing -- involves the giving of self to others.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — A bizarre series of comedies took place behind the scenes in the Dominican Republic all adding up to tragedy. They also emphasized the importance of strengthening the peace-keeping machinery of the Western Hemisphere.

The actors who performed on the Dominican stage were charming, temperamental, personalities. The mistakes they made seriously hurt Pan-American cooperation and U.S. prestige. Here are some of the actors and some of their mistakes:

Actor No. 1 is Dr. Jose Mora of Uruguay, Secretary General of the OAS. He holds office for ten years and nobody can remove him. Attached to him for life is charming, very wealthy Senora Mora, who doesn't like to have the Ambassador left our of her sight. Once when he was attending an international conference in Montevideo, she burnt up the airwaves scolding his secretary because the secretary answered the phone in the Ambassador's bedroom. Ham radio operators between Washington and Montevideo were all privileged to tune in.

Ambassador Mora has sent some unique reports back to Washington. They consist of detailed accounts of how he delivered 200 kilos of beans on such and such a street corner at 2 P.M. in Santo Domingo, 220 kilos of beans on another street corner the next day, and 200 kilos of beans or other food at another street corner later. Dr. Mora, from reading these reports, did little toward conciliation, much toward distributing beans.

—ARGENTINE ACTOR—

Actor No. 2 is OAS Ambassador Ricardo Colombo, former Argentine Congressman from San Juan province. Some time ago President Ilia approached Colombo, whose district had lost three elections, and told him he wanted an able man to represent Argentina on the Organization of American States. Colombo, he said, would be just the man.

"But how could I get along in New York? I don't speak English," protested Colombo. Apparently the Argentine Congressman did not know enough about the OAS to realize it was located in Washington, not New York. Nevertheless he was appointed, and last month found himself in the Dominican Republic as head of an OAS peace team.

He was not a huge success. Finally President Johnson, after waiting patiently for the OAS to bring peace, sent his own truce team to Santo Domingo, including his personal adviser, McGeorge Bundy.

Two days later, at 1 A.M., the Argentine Foreign Office in Buenos Aires issued a critical statement that the United States had interfered with the OAS, the OAS peace team returned to Washington, and Argentina withdrew its previous decision to contribute troops to the OAS peace-keeping force.

In Pan American diplomatic circles it was alleged that Dr. Bundy had failed to consult Dr. Colombo and ignored the OAS peace team's existence.

—CHAMPIONS OF DEMOCRACY—

Actor No. 3 is Col. Francisco Caamano Deno who last month wrote a letter to the OAS in Washington inviting the three democracy champions of the Caribbean — ex - Governor Munoz Marin of Puerto Rico, ex-President Romulo Betancourt of Venezuela, and ex-President Pepi Figueres of Costa Rica — to come and investigate whether there was any Communism in the rebel forces. The Caamano letter was read to the OAS by Ambassador Magnet of Chile. But nothing was done. Ambassador Sevilla Sacasa of Nicaragua, a strong friend of the United States and representative of dictator country, discreetly sidetracked the proposal.

Many OAS ambassadors favored the investigation. The three highly respected champions of democracy remained waiting in Washington, subject to call. Finally Venezuelan Ambassador Enrique Tejera Paris read the Caamano letter a second time. Still there was no action. Even today there has been no action on this proposal to investigate the extent of Communism.

Actor No. 4 is William Tapley Bennett, Ambassador to the Dominican Republic, an experienced diplomat, but credited with being too flustered when he cabled President Johnson asking for military intervention.

It's true that bullets were being fired through the American embassy. But it's also true that diplomats' lives were probably just as safe there as in the nation's capital where the Ambassador of Kuwait and his wife were recently tied hand-and-foot by U.S. gangsters, and where a visiting German publisher was yoked and robbed when standing in a vestibule out of the rain. There are more murders in Washington per month, according to FBI figures, than Americans have been murdered in the Dominican Republic in ten years.

Actor No. 5 is Gen. Antonio Imbert, provisional president of the Dominican Republic under the military junta, and a dashing figure whom Americans distrusted in the past. He was one of those who assassinated Dictator Trujillo and thereafter made himself a "general," now, wears a natty uniform and a Spanish pearl-handled revolver.

Despite his egocentricities, he was picked by special U.S. Ambassador John Bartlow Martin to become head of the military government. Shortly after being put in power by the United States, he turned on the United States, refused to agree to a peace unless he dictated its terms.

These are some of the actors and backstage developments in the tangled, dangerous Dominican crisis, which temporarily at least lost support for the United States in Latin America at a time when we had already lost support in Asia and Africa.

If all Commencement speeches were laid end to end it is safe to predict that the world would no longer remember what was said there.

Anyone who fancies that he is mature and almost everyone does, can think a moment and come up with what he believes is good advice for the graduates -- pure nuggets of gold, as it were.

Much solid advice has been delivered to graduates through the years by older men, who sincerely believed that they had an important message to relate to the young, even a mission to do it.

But who can remember what any of them said? The answer is no one. The advice has been ignored, however politely.

Most of the speeches, full of cliches and homelies, haven't even made decent reading in the newspaper accounts about them.

The graduates themselves are too self conscious in their caps and gowns (some of them itch), too concerned about their personal appearance when the spotlight shines on them, too occupied with thinking about a boy friend or girl friend in the class, too happy to be getting out of school or occupied by other diversionary thoughts to listen to an old buzzard tell how he acquired a big bag of sheckles or achieved another form of success.

Sikeston high school has recognized the futility of this type of ceremonial expounding of thread bare themes by unattractive old codgers. The false teeth have ceased rattling there.

A few of the outstanding members of the class in Sikeston give short speeches. No, what they say won't be remembered but most of the class probably will at least remember who said it. At least that's a reasonable hope.

MESSAGE TO MR. WIRTZ

A Cabinet member is presumed to be a public servant, a steward of the public interest. Scratch that presumption.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has just reminded us that he is a lackey of the bosses of organized labor.

The voice of the parrot was heard in the land on Monday. That was when Secretary Wirtz went before the House labor subcommittee to advocate repeal of Section 14 (b) of the Taft - Hartley Act, a move which could abolish voluntary union membership anywhere in America.

The union chiefs decreed that "right-to-work" laws -- now prevailing in 19 states, including Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi -- should be abolished at the Federal level. The Democratic Party incorporated this dogma of the union bosses in the 1964 platform. President Johnson has heeled to the master's command, and obedient Willard Wirtz does the same.

But what union commanders say does not reflect public opinion.

Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N. J., conducted nationwide survey on the right-to-work issue last year. It found that 67 per cent of the American people support the idea of voluntary union membership. Nineteen states have laws that conform with that consensus.

Right-to-work laws do not outlaw unions. They do not discourage union membership. They don't prevent recruiting. They simply prevent the union shop, which forces employes to join a union even if they prefer not to.

Secretary Wirtz' hoop-jumping at the command of organized labor is not altogether surprising. Just two years ago he was arm - twisting in behalf of a $100-a-plate dinner for Senator Harrison A. Williams, Jr. (D-N.J.), an apostle in labor's drive to repeal 14 (b).

It is obvious that Secretary Wirtz has not examined his testimony closely. He is wrong when he says that the supporters of 14 (b) are "virtually all businessmen." The National Right To Work Committee is headed by S. D. Cadwallader, a member of the Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen. We receive communications from union men who do not want 14 (b) repealed -- not because they oppose union but because they fear union despots.

Many good union members insist upon the right to throw out would-be racketeers. A large proportion of workers would prefer to work in a chosen job without being forced into a union.

Had Mr. Wirtz glanced over his shoulder he might have seen a great many farmers who also object strongly to the power politics of big organized labor.

Secretary Wirtz should be reminded of the job permit scandals of the World War II period, which occasionally crop up today, particularly in defense industries. He also should remember the union-agent racketeers who have made entry into a trade impossible for those they don't want. He should heed the words of Representative Phillip M. Landrum (D., Ga.) , coauthor of the Landrum-Griffin Act and an expert on labor and management, who has said:

"When a person is forced to join, forced to pay dues and at the same time denied a voice in union affairs, then what effective checkrein is there on a union officer? Or what effective checkrein is there on the racketeer who takes over a union? Or what effective checkrein is there on the employer who is willing to enter into a dishonest arrangement with a dishonest unin officer or with a racketeer?"

Repeal of Section 14 (b) is an open door to all these evils. That is reason enough to condemn the political pressure which has forced the current Administration to bow to politicking union bosses.

But the crux of the issue has been ignored by organized labor. In every one of the 19 states with right-to-work laws, the voting public could bring about repeal if it so desired. The Taft-Hartley Act does not insist on the right-to-work laws -- it simply permits it where it is wanted by the people. So long as 14 (b) remains in the Federal law, the voters of any state can take either position -- for or against the union shop.

If 14 (b) is repealed, a labor minority can exert a dictatorial power over both workers and businesses in states where the public majority prefers its right to work.

The union lords have not proved their case. They have used the vise of bloc vote control. Therefore, the voters of individual states should have a voice in the kind of labor laws they want. If but one state wanted 14 (b) to remain intact, it should be heard.

There are, in fact, 19 such states. Two-thirds of the American people want 14 (b). They also speak to Secretary Wirtz. Commercial Appeal

THE EGGHEAD EXPLOSION

It is better to learn late than never. - Publilius Syrus

"NEVER IN HISTORY has it been so materially comfortable to be an egghead." The speaker is an anonymous University of Pennsylvania graduate student with a full-expense fellowship in biology. He speaks for the brighter segment of his generation. A few specifics:

The 1936 class of Dartmouth College, as reported in a scientific sampling 25 years later, sent 45 per cent of its graduates on to further study. If present trends hold up, 80 per cent or more of the 1966 graduating class will become candidates for graduate degrees.

Schools such as Princeton, Harvard, Cornell, University of Pennsylvania, and New York University last September sent 60 to 85 per cent of their 1964 liberal arts men into full-time graduate study. (Comparatively few women take graduate school courses, except teaching candidates.).

Of the nation's 450,000 bachelor degree graduates of last June, 100,000 are now working for higher degrees, according to a survey by the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company. More than 90,000 master's degrees were conferred in 1964, as well as 13,000 philosophy doctorates. Each year sees a rise in the number of advanced degrees of between 6 and 7 per cent. Thus the total of graduate degrees awarded this month will be in the order of 110,000.

College and universities are expanding their efforts to supply direly needed candidates for doctorates. Tulane is introducing a program that will give outstanding students up to $8,200 in aid to help them earn doctorates in four years. Harvard picks 25 of its best and brightest and gives them free tuition and up to $2000 a year for five years.

IN THE CICERONIAN SENSE of cultivating a fertile mind with learning all this sounds ideally delightful. But there is another side to the coin. Nobody questions the need for graduate study for scientific and technological pursuits. But placement officers responding to the insurance company survey cited above complained that the "chase after higher degrees is becoming indiscriminate and overdone, especially in nontechnical areas." A spokesman for Princeton noted that "a considerable number " of students chose graduate school because of "procrastination, lack of career information, draft apprehension, vocational immaturity, and liberal graduate fellowships."

Placement officers also are beginning to sniff an anti-business attitude on campuses that could become serious. Harvard last year sent 31 graduates to the Peace Corps, only nine fewer than it fielded for business. An age group that resents the conformism its older brothers and sisters sedulously aped fears getting caught in the pin-striped, button - down-collar labyrinth. "We are deeply concerned with the number of college youths who have rejected business as a career," says John E. Harmon, director of manpower development, U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

THE COLLEGE CRUSH of the past few years has pushed up to the graduate level, without reducing any of the pressure from below. Enrollment of students aiming to advanced degrees was up about 12 per cent in land-grant institutions this year.

A great many institutions are turning to an 11 or 12 month operation. Year-round higher education would create badly needed space for 1.2 million students.

A further answer would be tightening requirements for admission to graduate schools. Standards are being raised, of course, but only effectively at institutions where standards always have been discriminatingly high.

Undoubtedly reflecting their growing disenchantment with the aid extended by the 1964 income tax cut, the nation's independent business proprietors have registered their highest approval yet of the "plow back" tax reform.

In a nationwide balloting on H. R. 2593, introduced by Rep. Charles Chamberlain (Mich.) the independent businessmen voted in favor by a majority of 82%, with 15% opposed and 3% undecided.

This bill, which would permit businessmen to deduct from taxes up to 20% of a year's earnings to a maximum of $30-000 to reinvest in plant inventory and accounts receivable, was introduced in the last session of Congress by Rep. Chamberlain, and supported at that time by 73% of the independent businessmen.

In 1962 when they voted on the same measure, which had been introduced by Sen. John Sparkman (Ala.) and co-sponsored by 24 other senators, including the entire membership of the Senate Small Business Committee, 80% were in favor. In 1959, when the same measure was introduced by Rep. Tom Steed (Okla.) a majority of 72% favored it.

In the present session Rep. Abraham Multer (New York) has two bills introduced which would achieve the same purpose, but for the survey the Chamberlain bill was presented to the nation's independent business proprietors.

The independent business proprietors also think that the enactment of the "plow back" allowance is the most important single action that could be taken to promote expansion and new job opportunities. This is reflected in a separate year long continuous survey being conducted by the Federation, which shows over 80% of the respondents to date favor this move when asked what measures could be taken to accelerate expansion.

The decision of the Organization of American States to send an inter-American peace -keeping force to the Dominican Republic is a long step toward building that organization into something more than a debating society.

Although five of the largest nations -- Chile, Ecuador, Mexico, Peru and Uruguay -- voted against the proposal and Venezuela abstained, and although it is more an emergency prescription against the symptoms than the causes of the political sickness racking the Dominican Republic, it sets a far-reaching precedent.

If the United States can no longer employ the gunboat diplomacy of the 19th century and lomacy of the 19th century and act as the hemisphere's policeman, as our sister republics repeatedly tell us, then the only alternative is for them to accept the fact that the responsibility for what goes on in the hemisphere belongs to all of them.

At the least, the inter-American police will hold a lid on the blood shed in the Dominican Republic and allow the United States to withdraw its troops, or some of them, to where they will be safe from snipers -- both those who fire bullets and those who issue white papers.

But it is to be hoped that the peacekeeping force will accomplish much more than the least -- that it will give the democratic process another chance in the Dominican Republic so that its people may eventually establish a stable, free and progressive government of their own choosing.

It is possible that there could be more success in peaceful negotiating of problems in Asia and Latin America if there were a stronger feeling that the American leadership is sincere in desiring freedom.

This statement by C. Wilson Harder, president of the National Federation of Independent Business, is made in connection with the proposal to eliminate Section 14b of the Taft - Hartley Act, which permits states to enact "right to work" laws.

He said that the proposal to deliver all workers to the domination of labor leaders is quite a cynical reflection on the integrity of the American system, and is bound to have an effect on all nations of the world.

"There is the Biblical injunction," he points out, "that before removing the mote from thy neighbor's eye, thou should first cast out the beam from thine own. Thus, those who oppose the American espousal of freedom no doubt wonder how the American leadership can take a position for freedom for others, while seeking bondage for its own people."

PROPAGANDA'S VICTIMS

Eighty percent of the American people are opposed to Communism. Because Communism hides behind many false masks, it is difficult to oppose this menace without the opposers' motives being impugned.

A person who speaks out against Communism will most likely be branded anit-Catholic, anti - Protestant, anit-Semitic, anti-Negro, or anti-Labor, or labeled with such other epithets as "dangerous right-winger" and "extremist." Whether such labels can be permanently pinned on a citizen whose fault is defense of his country against a mortal enemy depends on the public's attitude.

Public acceptance of smear attacks will assure continuation of these injustices, for the public will be told anything it is willing to accept or will tolerate.

A few citizens bear the brunt of these attacks for their anti-Communist activities because they carry most of the load. If more of our citizenry participated in defending our system of government from Communist subversion, there would be no small embattled faction bearing "active anti-Communist" labels against whom leftists could arouse public opinion.

One recent victim of such agitation has been President Johnson for his stand against Communism in Southeast Asia and Latin America. Nettled at the panic of his advisers in the face of leftist criticism, he complained, "You guys are so busy saving my face, you're going to lose me my pants!"

If everyone devoted ten minutes or more daily before falling asleep at night to opposing Communism, certainly Communism would become less menacing and probably fade away. "Ten minutes each day" for two-thirds of the adult population would amount to 20 million hours daily, and Communism cannot survive that much opposition. HLH

He is Lt. George M. Sheldon, Olumpia, Wash., a former naval combat flier who flew 71 missions in Korea off the carrier Philippine Sea. He also holds five Air Medals and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The chaplain, who served 13 years as a line officer in the Navy after graduating from Annapolis, is highly popular with the nearly 600 members of Mobile Construction Battalion 10.

As one of the Seabees said: "We do hard, sweaty work from 12 to 18 hours a day. When we have a problem, we need someone to talk to who can talk our language. The padre can."

Chaplain Sheldon is 6 foot 1, has hazel eyes, closecropped, iron-gray hair and a Lincolnesque countenance. He wears a gold cross on his shirt and a big colorful Vietnamese jungle hat that makes him easily identifiable from a distance.

"A variety of things led me to the ministry," he said. "When I joined the Episcopal Church in 1955, I made a commitment to Christ and his Church. I began to read the Bible as a coherent whole rather than as bits and piecemeal. Gradually I came to the conviction that this was the work I should follow."

He resigned from active naval duty in 1959 to enter the Divinity School of the Pacific at Berkeley, Calif. After graduating in 1962, he served in parishes in the San Francisco Bay area and Salt Lake City before rejoining the Navy.

The padre works as hard as any Seabee himself. He holds six religious services weekly for the Seabees and Marines, helps in the Military's people-to- people program, and is active in the direction of a native orphanage. But his greatest satisfaction comes from the endless hours of counseling men who come to him for help - Protestants, Catholics and Jews alike.

"They are typical of the problems of men away from home -- loneliness, financial difficulties, and worries over the stability of their marriage," he said, "Occasionally, there is a man who doesn't adjust well to military life and believes he is being picked on.

"Our biggest problems result from communications failures --when men don't get letters from home regularly or don't write home regularly them - selves.

"Mail is the greatest morale builder. The simple words "I love you" are still the most important in the world."

Chaplain Sheldon, whose wife and two children live in Oxnard, Calif., hasn't flown an airplane for nine years, still hankers to now and then.

"But I like this work better," he said. "The thrill of flying is essentially selfish and can be shared only with other people in the same game. But any kind of ministry -- whether it be preaching, teaching, nursing or healing -- involves the giving of self to others.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — A bizarre series of comedies took place behind the scenes in the Dominican Republic all adding up to tragedy. They also emphasized the importance of strengthening the peace-keeping machinery of the Western Hemisphere.

The actors who performed on the Dominican stage were charming, temperamental, personalities. The mistakes they made seriously hurt Pan-American cooperation and U.S. prestige. Here are some of the actors and some of their mistakes:

Actor No. 1 is Dr. Jose Mora of Uruguay, Secretary General of the OAS. He holds office for ten years and nobody can remove him. Attached to him for life is charming, very wealthy Senora Mora, who doesn't like to have the Ambassador left our of her sight. Once when he was attending an international conference in Montevideo, she burnt up the airwaves scolding his secretary because the secretary answered the phone in the Ambassador's bedroom. Ham radio operators between Washington and Montevideo were all privileged to tune in.

Ambassador Mora has sent some unique reports back to Washington. They consist of detailed accounts of how he delivered 200 kilos of beans on such and such a street corner at 2 P.M. in Santo Domingo, 220 kilos of beans on another street corner the next day, and 200 kilos of beans or other food at another street corner later. Dr. Mora, from reading these reports, did little toward conciliation, much toward distributing beans.

—ARGENTINE ACTOR—

Actor No. 2 is OAS Ambassador Ricardo Colombo, former Argentine Congressman from San Juan province. Some time ago President Ilia approached Colombo, whose district had lost three elections, and told him he wanted an able man to represent Argentina on the Organization of American States. Colombo, he said, would be just the man.

"But how could I get along in New York? I don't speak English," protested Colombo. Apparently the Argentine Congressman did not know enough about the OAS to realize it was located in Washington, not New York. Nevertheless he was appointed, and last month found himself in the Dominican Republic as head of an OAS peace team.

He was not a huge success. Finally President Johnson, after waiting patiently for the OAS to bring peace, sent his own truce team to Santo Domingo, including his personal adviser, McGeorge Bundy.

Two days later, at 1 A.M., the Argentine Foreign Office in Buenos Aires issued a critical statement that the United States had interfered with the OAS, the OAS peace team returned to Washington, and Argentina withdrew its previous decision to contribute troops to the OAS peace-keeping force.

In Pan American diplomatic circles it was alleged that Dr. Bundy had failed to consult Dr. Colombo and ignored the OAS peace team's existence.

—CHAMPIONS OF DEMOCRACY—

Actor No. 3 is Col. Francisco Caamano Deno who last month wrote a letter to the OAS in Washington inviting the three democracy champions of the Caribbean — ex - Governor Munoz Marin of Puerto Rico, ex-President Romulo Betancourt of Venezuela, and ex-President Pepi Figueres of Costa Rica — to come and investigate whether there was any Communism in the rebel forces. The Caamano letter was read to the OAS by Ambassador Magnet of Chile. But nothing was done. Ambassador Sevilla Sacasa of Nicaragua, a strong friend of the United States and representative of dictator country, discreetly sidetracked the proposal.

Many OAS ambassadors favored the investigation. The three highly respected champions of democracy remained waiting in Washington, subject to call. Finally Venezuelan Ambassador Enrique Tejera Paris read the Caamano letter a second time. Still there was no action. Even today there has been no action on this proposal to investigate the extent of Communism.

Actor No. 4 is William Tapley Bennett, Ambassador to the Dominican Republic, an experienced diplomat, but credited with being too flustered when he cabled President Johnson asking for military intervention.

It's true that bullets were being fired through the American embassy. But it's also true that diplomats' lives were probably just as safe there as in the nation's capital where the Ambassador of Kuwait and his wife were recently tied hand-and-foot by U.S. gangsters, and where a visiting German publisher was yoked and robbed when standing in a vestibule out of the rain. There are more murders in Washington per month, according to FBI figures, than Americans have been murdered in the Dominican Republic in ten years.

Actor No. 5 is Gen. Antonio Imbert, provisional president of the Dominican Republic under the military junta, and a dashing figure whom Americans distrusted in the past. He was one of those who assassinated Dictator Trujillo and thereafter made himself a "general," now, wears a natty uniform and a Spanish pearl-handled revolver.

Despite his egocentricities, he was picked by special U.S. Ambassador John Bartlow Martin to become head of the military government. Shortly after being put in power by the United States, he turned on the United States, refused to agree to a peace unless he dictated its terms.

These are some of the actors and backstage developments in the tangled, dangerous Dominican crisis, which temporarily at least lost support for the United States in Latin America at a time when we had already lost support in Asia and Africa.

Miss Nancy Boardman And Dennis Black Are Married

Huge baskets of white gladioli tipped in aqua and tied with bows flanked the communion rail and six high mass candles decorated the sanctuary of the St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church Saturday, June 5 at 10 o'clock in the morning for the wedding vows of Miss Nancy Boardman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Boardman of Sikeston and Dennis Black, son of C. E. Black and the late Mrs. Black of St. Louis.

The Right Reverend Monsignor Walter J. McGrane performed the double ring ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass as the couple knelt on the prie dieu in the sanctuary. The pews were marked with white pompon chrysanthemums and aqua streamers.

The wedding march began and the radiant bride, on the arm of her father, was escorted down the flower strewn aisle to the waiting bridegroon.

The bridesmaids, Jackie Freshwater, Patsy Vaughn and Kay Sargent, were dressed in floor-length dresses of aqua chiffon over taffeta, matching slippers and carried bouquets of white gladioli from which aqua streamers fell.

Scott Black, brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Henry Algermissen and Jim Aubuchon. John McMullin, cousin of the bride; Jack Keppel and Larry G. Reynolds were ushers.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the church hall. Mrs. Janet Poppy was in charge of the guest register. She wore a carnation corsage.

A five tiered wedding cake decorated with aqua roses and topped with a miniature bride and groom was served by Sharon Knight. Miss Carol Houelkamp served punch to the guests from a crystal bowl. Mints and nuts were served from silver compotes.

The gift table was overlaid in white and centered with wedding bells and miniature bride and groom. At each end stood baskets of gladioli.

After the reception a dinner, served by Mrs. H. G. Carrington, Mrs. Lucille Wallen and Mrs. E. H. Laseter, was held in the cafeteria of the church for Mr. and Mrs. Black's sorority and fraternity friends, out-of-town guests and the wedding party.

Mr. Black is teaching in St. Charles. He is a 1964 graduate of Southeast Missouri State College where he was president of T.K.E. Fraternity Greek Governing Board and a member of T.F.C.

Mrs. Black is also a graduate of Southeast Missouri State College where she was president of Sigma Sigma Sigma and Sweetheart of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity and a member of Greek Governing Board Panhellenic Council and A.W.S. She will be teaching English in Wright City.

Mrs. Dennis Black

Huge baskets of white gladioli tipped in aqua and tied with bows flanked the communion rail and six high mass candles decorated the sanctuary of the St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church Saturday, June 5 at 10 o'clock in the morning for the wedding vows of Miss Nancy Boardman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Boardman of Sikeston and Dennis Black, son of C. E. Black and the late Mrs. Black of St. Louis.

The Right Reverend Monsignor Walter J. McGrane performed the double ring ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass as the couple knelt on the prie dieu in the sanctuary. The pews were marked with white pompon chrysanthemums and aqua streamers.

The wedding march began and the radiant bride, on the arm of her father, was escorted down the flower strewn aisle to the waiting bridegroon.

The bridesmaids, Jackie Freshwater, Patsy Vaughn and Kay Sargent, were dressed in floor-length dresses of aqua chiffon over taffeta, matching slippers and carried bouquets of white gladioli from which aqua streamers fell.

Scott Black, brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Henry Algermissen and Jim Aubuchon, John McMullin, cousin of the bride; Jack Keppel and Larry G. Reynolds were ushers.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the church hall. Mrs. Janet Poppy was in charge of the guest register. She wore a carnation corsage.

A five tiered wedding cake decorated with aqua roses and topped with a miniature bride and groom was served by Sharon Knight. Miss Carol Houelkamp served punch to the guests from a crystal bowl. Mints and nuts were served from silver compotes.

After the reception a dinner, served by Mrs. H. G. Carrington, Mrs. Lucille Wallen and Mrs. E. H. Laseter, was held in the cafeteria of the church for Mr. and Mrs. Black's sorority and fraternity friends, out-of-town guests and the wedding party.

Mr. Black is teaching in St. Charles. He is a 1964 graduate of Southeast Missouri State College where he was president of T.K.E. Fraternity Greek Governing Board and a member of T.F.C.

Mrs. Black is also a graduate of Southeast Missouri State College where she was president of Sigma Sigma Sigma and Sweetheart of Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity and a member of Greek Governing Board Panhellenic Council and A.W.S. She will be teaching English in Wright City.

OMAHA - The 19th College World Series heads into the second round today with top - ranked Arizona State facing St. Louis and Ohio State meeting Washington State in the top games and the top players awaiting the first major league draft of free agents.

The first round produced no major surprises and much of the talk centered on the draft in New York. It will be a big surprise if Arizona State's Rick Monday, the long-striding 19-year-old outfielder with a Duke Snider swing, isn't the No. 1 choice. The Kansas City A's get first choice.

Monday was far from the top hitter of the first round, though, as he settled for 1-for-5, including a bunt single and sacrifice fly.

Little Bob Fry of Washington State set a Series one-game record of four stolen bases, including a theft of home. He was 3-for-5 and belted a two-run homer as the Cougars whipped Texas 12-5.

Sal Bando of Arizona State slammed a single, double and home run and drove in three runs as the Sun Devils cut down Lafayette 14-1 for their 50th victory, an NCAA record. Righthander John the Robot Pavlik had a no hitter until the seventh and was 3-for-4 at the plate.

Ohio State will start John Durant, left-hander with a 5-2 record and 2.22 earned run average against Washington State lefty Joe MacLean, 3-0 and 2.79, at 7 p.m., EST. Arizona State will use Ron Lea, a right - hander who stands 11-2 and 2.92, against St. Louis southpaw Tom Tocco, 5-1 and 1.65 at 9:30.

In the loser's bracket, Florida State's Cliff Ranew, a tall right-hander who is 9-3 and 2.36, will start against Gary Moore of Texas, a lefty who stands 5-3 and 2.85, at 12 p.m.

Connecticut will start Tommy Lawton, sophomore lefty who is 3-1 and 0.36, against Lafayette right-hander Preston Denby, 3-2 and 2.28 at 3 p.m.

The first four games produced five homers, compared to one for the entire 1964 tournament. The St. Louis-Connecticut game was played mostly in light wind-blown drizzle, but the field was covered overnight.

Great Pitching Dominates Little League Action

Sikeston's Little League was dominated by two young pitchers in action at Puckett field last night. Lewis downed Kiwanis 4 to 0 in the first contest. In the second game Lions downed A & B Oil Company 5 to 0.

Lewis pitcher Schatzley pitched a one hit contest over Kiwanis. The only hit off of Schatzley was a fourth inning single by centerfielder Hampton.

Lewis rapped out 7 hits off of Kiwanis pitcher Miller who was charged with the loss.

Schatzley also proved that the proverb "Pitchers can't hit" was wrong as he racked out two hits, one a home run in the third. Burnett also had two hits for Lewis.

LONDON -- Jim Clark, the Scotsman who won the Indianapolis 500 auto race last week, drove his Cosworth Ford to victory in the International London Trophy race for Formula 2 cars on the Crystal Palace Circuit Monday.

LONDON - Alan Simpson set a British record for the mile run Monday with a clocking of 3:56.6 in the British Games at White City Stadium.

NEW YORK - Chuck Mercein, Yale fullback, signed with New York of the National Football League Monday as the Giants completed a sweep by signing all 16 of their eligible draft choices.

TORONTO - Sam Snead, only golfer to win the Canadian Open three times, has entered this year's championship at Toronto's Mississaugua course July 14-17.

The 53-year-old veteran from White Sulpher Springs, W. Va., won his first Canadian Open on the same course 26 years ago.

To prevent chocolate and vanilla puddings from getting a rather firm top when they stand awhile, cover the pudding dish tightly or lay a moist cloth over the top.

Snead, Middlecoff And Bolt Try For U.S. Open Today

NEW YORK - Sam Snead, Cary Middlecoff, Tommy Bolt and a score of other of golf's biggest names sought to qualify today for the 65th National Open Championship -- and a young assistant pro from Ohio gave them a target.

His six-under-par effort over the Clovernook course in Cincinnati was best of the 90 players who scrambled for 18 berths at Cincinnati, Chicago, Dallas and Portland, Ore., and looked good enough possibly to stand up under today's heavier bombardment.

A total of 369 players, ex-champions and tour regulars, were to fight it out at nine sites for the remaining 101 spots in the 150-man field which tees off June 17 over the Bellerive Country Club in St. Louis.

At Detroit, where 35 players vie for 13 spots, Snead faced such rivals as exchampions Bolt and Middlecoff, Walter Burkemo and Jim Ferrier, both former PGA kings.

Bowling Winners Announced

By DON SAVAGE

The St. Louis Cardinals' early season problems, which finds them now playing even .500 baseball could be contributed to a number of factors.

Before we discuss this topic any further, it might be a good idea to look back at last season. At this time last year the Cards were in fourth place, 3 1/2 games off the pace of the then league leading Philadelphia Phillies, and only three games over the .500 mark.

This season, the brightest light of the early-season Cardinal performances was World Series hero Bob Gibson. The big righthander won 7 straight games, three of which were shutouts, before the season was a month old.

He also was bidding for the league's strikeout championship, with 45 in his first 47 innings. Last year he barely missed it, being nosed out by Pittsburgh's Bob Veale.

Among the hitters, Curt Flood and Lou Brock were the early leaders. Flood assembled a 15 game hitting streak, while Brock put together one of eight games before being stopped.

In addition, Brock looked like he was going to furnish some basestealing opposition to Los Angeles' Maury Wills, who has been the leader the last few years. Wills beat Brock by ten in 1964, 53 to 43.

In the early-season going, Brock stole 13 times on his first 15 attempts, and both times he was thrown out at third base on calls that were questioned.

Two rookies also showing signs of future prominence are: Steve Carlton, a 20-year-old lefthander from Florida and Nelson Briles, a 21-year-old from Dorris, California, both turned in fine bullpen performances.

The Cardinals have had many handicaps to overcome, which could help explain their slow start. Tim McCarver suffered a broken index finger on his right hand during spring training and missed the first week of the season. Ken Boyer lost several games on two different occasions with severe pains in his lower back, and Bill White suffered a severely bruised right bone in a dive for a line drive through the infield.

PITCHING -- Luis Tiant, Cleveland, pitched a two-hitter and retired 15 consecutive batters at one stretch as the Cleveland Indians edged Minnesota 2-1 for their fifth straight triumph.

BATTING - Al Kaline, Detroit slammed two homers and a double, his second homer coming with a man on in the eight inning and giving the Tigers a 6-5 triumph over the Los Angeles Angels.

In last night's action, again at Farris field, Fabick went down as Leslie Insurance rolled to a 7 to 5 victory in the first game. You don't have to like golf to like our Buick "Swinging Sales Spree."

Just driving. (And saving money.)

The reason you have to like driving is that once you get in a Buick Special (above), you may never get out again. If you like golf, a Buick Special could save enough to pay for some new equipment. If you don't you can drive out to the club in style, and watch the others frustrate themselves—and still save money on gas. (If you patronize a drive-in bank, that solves the problem of getting out of the car, too.) We know you'll like Buick comfort, luxury, engineering and quality. And our Wildcat power. These are the things we put in every Buick. And right now—during our Swinging Sales Spree—is the best time to come in and see them. (The "greens fees" are very low.)

OMAHA - The 19th College World Series heads into the second round today with top - ranked Arizona State facing St. Louis and Ohio State meeting Washington State in the top games and the top players awaiting the first major league draft of free agents.

The first round produced no major surprises and much of the talk centered on the draft in New York. It will be a big surprise if Arizona State's Rick Monday, the long-striding 19-year-old outfielder with a Duke Snider swing, isn't the No. 1 choice. The Kansas City A's get first choice.

Monday was far from the top hitter of the first round, though, as he settled for 1-for-5, including a bunt single and sacrifice fly.

Little Bob Fry of Washington State set a Series one-game record of four stolen bases, including a theft of home. He was 3-for-5 and belted a two-run homer as the Cougars whipped Texas 12-5.

Sal Bando of Arizona State slammed a single, double and home run and drove in three runs as the Sun Devils cut down Lafayette 14-1 for their 50th victory, an NCAA record. Righthander John the Robot Pavlik had a no hitter until the seventh and was 3-for-4 at the plate.

Ohio State will start John Durant, left-hander with a 5-2 record and 2.22 earned run average against Washington State lefty Joe MacLean, 3-0 and 2.79, at 7 p.m., EST. Arizona State will use Ron Lea, a right - hander who stands 11-2 and 2.92, against St. Louis southpaw Tom Tocco, 5-1 and 1.65 at 9:30.

In the loser's bracket, Florida State's Cliff Ranew, a tall right-hander who is 9-3 and 2.36, will start against Gary Moore of Texas, a lefty who stands 5-3 and 2.85, at 12 p.m.

Connecticut will start Tommy Lawton, sophomore lefty who is 3-1 and 0.36, against Lafayette right-hander Preston Denby, 3-2 and 2.28 at 3 p.m.

The first four games produced five homers, compared to one for the entire 1964 tournament. The St. Louis-Connecticut game was played mostly in light wind-blown drizzle, but the field was covered overnight.

NEW YORK - Sam Snead, Cary Middlecoff, Tommy Bolt and a score of other of golf's biggest names sought to qualify today for the 65th National Open Championship -- and a young assistant pro from Ohio gave them a target.

His six-under-par effort over the Clovernook course in Cincinnati was best of the 90 players who scrambled for 18 berths at Cincinnati, Chicago, Dallas and Portland, Ore., and looked good enough possibly to stand up under today's heavier bombardment.

A total of 369 players, ex-champions and tour regulars, were to fight it out at nine sites for the remaining 101 spots in the 150-man field which tees off June 17 over the Bellerive Country Club in St. Louis.

At Detroit, where 35 players vie for 13 spots, Snead faced such rivals as exchampions Bolt and Middlecoff, Walter Burkemo and Jim Ferrier, both former PGA kings.

Great Pitching Dominates Little League Action

Sikeston's Little League was dominated by two young pitchers in action at Puckett field last night. Lewis downed Kiwanis 4 to 0 in the first contest. In the second game Lions downed A & B Oil Company 5 to 0.

Lewis pitcher Schatzley pitched a one hit contest over Kiwanis. The only hit off of Schatzley was a fourth inning single by centerfielder Hampton.

Lewis rapped out 7 hits off of Kiwanis pitcher Miller who was charged with the loss.

Schatzley also proved that the proverb "Pitchers can't hit" was wrong as he racked out two hits, one a home run in the third. Burnett also had two hits for Lewis.

Sports TALK By DON SAVAGE

The St. Louis Cardinals' early season problems, which finds them now playing even .500 baseball could be contributed to a number of factors.

Before we discuss this topic any further, it might be a good idea to look back at last season. At this time last year the Cards were in fourth place, 3 1/2 games off the pace of the then league leading Philadelphia Phillies, and only three games over the .500 mark.

This season, the brightest light of the early-season Cardinal performances was World Series hero Bob Gibson. The big righthander won 7 straight games, three of which were shut-outs, before the season was a month old.

He also was bidding for the league's strike-out championship, with 45 in his first 47 innings. Last year he barely missed it, being nosed out by Pittsburgh's Bob Veale.

Among the hitters, Curt Flood and Lou Brock were the early leaders. Flood assembled a 15 game hitting streak, while Brock put together one of eight games before being stopped.

In addition, Brock looked like he was going to furnish some basestealing opposition to Los Angeles' Maury Wills, who has been the leader the last few years. Wills beat Brock by ten in 1964, 53 to 43.

In the early-season going, Brock stole 13 times on his first 15 attempts, and both times he was thrown out at third base on calls that were questioned.

Two rookies also showing signs of future prominence are: Steve Carlton, a 20-year-old lefthander from Florida and Nelson Briles, a 21-year-old from Dorris, California, both turned in fine bullpen performances.

The Cardinals have had many handicaps to overcome, which could help explain their slow start. Tim McCarver suffered a broken index finger on his right hand during spring training and missed the first week of the season. Ken Boyer lost several games on two different occasions with severe pains in his lower back, and Bill White suffered a severely bruised right bone in a dive for a line drive through the infield.

PITCHING -- Luis Tiant, Cleveland, pitched a two-hitter and retired 15 consecutive batters at one stretch as the Cleveland Indians edged Minnesota 2-1 for their fifth straight triumph.

BATTING - Al Kaline, Detroit slammed two homers and a double, his second homer coming with a man on in the eight inning and giving the Tigers a 6-5 triumph over the Los Angeles Angels.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I was 30 when I married an attorney. He traveled for an oil company and asked me to quit my job so we could travel together. (I was a financial officer in a large firm.) I did -- happily.

After 14 years of marriage my husband died suddenly. I felt as if my world had fallen apart. The doctor suggested I go back to work.

After six unsuccessful job interviews it became clear to me that nobody wanted to employ a 45-year-old woman. A kindly personnel director suggested that I give my age as 35. I decided to take his advice, without the least bit of guilt. I was offered three positions and I now have an extremely fine job. My boss calls me the answer to his prayers. He has given me two substantial salary increases.

Why does industry refuse to hire competent, experienced people because they are over 40?

If there is a sensible answer to this I would like to read it in your column.

HAD TO LIE TO WORK

Dear Had To: So would I. The Ann Landers column will provide the forum if someone in industry will respond to this woman's letter.

Dear Ann Landers: You often come to the front for waitresses, bus drivers, taxi drivers, firemen, policemen and office girls. Will you please print a few words to make life easier for those of us who sell ladies ready-to-wear?

I've been in the business for 15 years. The women I serve are becoming increasingly lazy, inconsiderate and thoughtless. One of my customers refuses to believe that she now wears a size 16 dress. She thinks of herself as a size 12, which she was five years ago. Only after she has ripped and stretched several garments will she try a size 16.

I have seen customers step out of chiffon and silk gowns and leave them on the floor. They put their heels through hems, break zippers, smear lipstick and eye make-up on delicate fabrics, then ask innocently, "Did I do that?"

Please publish my letter with your comments.

DISGUSTED WITH LADIES

Dear Disgusted: Females who are inconsiderate and sloppy are not ladies. I suggest this column be tacked up in the fitting rooms of ready-to-wear shops where the problem exists. Sometimes shame can work wonders.

Dear Ann Landers: Why would a handsome, successful, respected man leave a beautiful, brilliant, accomplished, generous, loving wife for a cheap, loud, crude, ignorant, gold-digging tramp?

The couple has been married 10 years and they have no children. Everyone thought they were ideally suited and blissfully happy. Why? Why? Why?

NO COMPREHEND

Dear No: Maybe he is going through the male menopause and is off his trolley. Or, perhaps, that cheap, loud, crude, ignorant gold-digging tramp fills an emotional need in the man that his beautiful, brilliant, accomplished, generous, loving wife does not.

Do you feel ill at ease . . . out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

WENNING SISTERS

COLUMBUS, Miss. (AP) — Two sets of sisters won out for leading campus posts in elections at the Mississippi State College for Women. Chris Roberts, Jackson, Miss., was elected president of the Woman's Recreation Association and her younger sister, Terry, was elected secretary.

Mary Grace Hays of Starkville, Miss., was elected head of the Student organization. And in the race for corresponding secretary of the organization, the winner was her younger sister, Evelyn.

'Lord, We Confess Our Sins, We Ask Forgiveness, We Pray for Rain!'

By FRED SOLLISH

IN the Spring of 1946, artist Norman Rockwell, in search of a typical country editor for a Saturday Evening Post series on the professions, opened the door to the weekly Monroe County Appeal in Monroe County, Mo., and discovered what he had been looking for.

The world Rockwell entered at the Appeal was a Model-T world where farmers stood about in faded gray coveralls and puffed corn cob pipes as they talked about their cattle and crops.

It was a world of little boys with bubble gum in their mouths and fishing poles slung across their freckled shoulders, trodding home to supper along sandy roads while a soft, breeze-stirred dusk descended on just another warm Missouri afternoon.

In the newspaper office cluttered with dried and yellowed copies from the past and the worn ends of wooden type strewn across the outer edges of ink-stained desks, it was a sunrise to sunset world that slept in the secure bosom of the great Midwest.

MONROE COUNTY APPEAL

Late War News

August, 1941—If you pray for rain and it comes, you've got to be thankful: Blanton was. These ran one week apart.

For the country editor in those quiet days shortly after World War II, there was time; time enough to know people by their first names and time enough for them to know his. There was even time for tomorrow.

Today, nearly twenty years later, not much has happened at the Monroe County Appeal to change this spirit. What Norman Rockwell found at the Appeal still seems to be there. Yet there have been a few changes made.

Jack Blanton, whose 1941 prayer headline asking for rain, drew national attention when it rained an hour after the paper was off the press, died in 1955 and was succeeded by the partnership of his son, Edgar J. Blanton, and R. I. "Si" Colborn.

It is Si Colborn who edits the paper today. He, like Jack Blanton, is a Baptist and a Democrat, probably in that order, and he won't tell whether or not there were clouds in the sky when Jack Blanton wrote that headline.

There have also been a few physical revisions at the Appeal. The main door was moved from the center of the shop some 15 feet to the right, and the old Miehle #1 press was traded recently for a later model, as was the office Chevrolet. Nothing, however, has changed the newspaper in any basic manner.

But change, in a small town, has a relationship with time that plays tricks with a visitor's imagination. If what Norman Rockwell saw can be described as the "timeless spirit" of country journalism—if his sketches convey an image of the country editor much as one would have expected to find him a century before—this image is as difficult to contain on paper as a ghost.

Si Colborn admired Jack Blanton and actively seeks to continue his traditions. But they're not in the furniture.

Currently, the Appeal is running a series of columns written in 1919 by Jack Blanton's father, Benjamin Franklin "Pappy" Blanton. The column runs under a cut of bearded "Pappy" and is titled, "When I Was A Boy."

Since "Pappy" was a boy at the same time as Mark Twain, and thus at the same time as Huckleberry Finn, there's at least a continuum of the country spirit at the Appeal. And it was this continuum that we journeyed to Paris, Mo., 135 miles northwest of St. Louis to find.

Paris is 25 miles up from Mexico, Mo. The road between the two towns, which is mostly straight, cuts through Poland hog and Angus cattle country. It's a smooth highway and the livestock vans can move on it at 70.

You don't say the town is located, because it sets. It sets—12 miles from the birthplace of Mark Twain—in a small valley where the great plains begin. Its population is stable at about 2,000 and has been since the land boom that brought Iowa and Illinois farmers in gave way to the urban migrations that took their children out.

There was a time when Monroe County, of which Paris is the seat, had a population of about 22,000. But that was in the 1880's when it held slaves. Now, the County's down to under half that.

There was also a time when Monroe County was mostly Baptist, and there weren't more than ten Republicans in its 669 square miles. Now there are barely 1,400 Baptists and the County is faced with creeping conservatism.

Average Income $4,500.—'Enough'

Economically, Paris is better off than many agricultural communities its size. The average income is about $4,500 a year which, as Si Colborn puts it, is enough to buy all the necessities and some of the luxuries. This too, has been stable for some time, even though a local appliance dealer is said to have netted almost $30,000 a year ago.

You wouldn't say shopping along Paris's one main street, Main Street, is brisk, but it is much more adequate than it used to be. There's a clothing store for men, two for women, two banks, two groceries, a hardware store, one or two feed stores and two other appliance dealerships that sell heavy duty equipment. The hardware store sells saddles to tourists.

Paris, an alcoholically dry town, owns its own water supply. It recently began purchasing electricity to sell back to the public at a profit. Si Colborn proudly calls this socialistic, but says it saves taxes.

The County, noted for mule breeding before World War II, has revived its saddle club, an equestrian pastime extinct for a number of years, and it now has over 250 members who ride to hounds. But time was in Monroe County when nearly every family owned a saddle horse, Si Colborn says.

Si Colborn doesn't think much of fox hunting, "sociologically speaking, or any other way," but the saddle club for the most part buys saddles from the hardware dealer. More money for the saddle dealer means more money kept in the County, and this is what Si Colborn supports in his editorials.

But Paris is still worried about economics. Farm depopulation has precipitated a crisis in rural America that Si Colborn feels can only be solved by bringing in more industry.

Right now Paris has a garment factory that employs about 75 local people. It isn't enough to "move the town forward," according to Si Colborn. What is needed is another factory, and he is crusading for a $300,000 bond issue to build one for any manufacturer who will lease it.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I was 30 when I married an attorney. He traveled for an oil company and asked me to quit my job so we could travel together. (I was a financial officer in a large firm.) I did — happily.

After 14 years of marriage my husband died suddenly. I felt as if my world had fallen apart. The doctor suggested I go back to work. Six unsuccessful job interviews it became clear to me that nobody wanted to employ a 45-year-old woman. A kindly personnel director suggested that I give my age as 35. I decided to take his advice. Within the week I was offered three positions and I now have an extremely fine job. My boss calls me the answer to his prayers. He has given me two substantial salary increases.

Why does industry refuse to hire competent, experienced people because they are over 40?

If there is a sensible answer to this I would like to read it in your column.

HAD TO LIE TO WORK

Dear Had To: So would I. The Ann Landers column will provide the forum if someone in industry will respond to this woman's letter.

Dear Ann Landers: You often come to the front for waitresses, bus drivers, taxi drivers, firemen, policemen and office girls. Will you please print a few words to make life easier for those of us who sell ladies ready-to-wear?

I've been in the business for 15 years. The women I serve are becoming increasingly lazy inconsiderate and thoughtless. One of my customers refuses to believe that she now wears a size 16 dress. She thinks of herself as a size 12, which she was five years ago. Only after she has ripped and stretched several garments will she try a size 16.

I have seen customers step out of chiffon and silk gowns and leave them on the floor. They put their heels through linings, break zippers, smear lipstick and eye make-up on delicate fabrics, and, most recently, "did I do that?"

Please publish my letter with your comments. WITH LADIES

Dear Disgusted: Females who are inconsiderate and sloppy are not ladies. I suggest this column be turned up in the fitting rooms of ready-to-wear shops where the problem exists. Sometimes shame can work wonders.

Dear Ann Landers: Why would a handsome, successful, respected man leave a beautiful, brilliant, accomplished, generous, loving wife for a cheap, ignorant, gold-digging tramp? The couple has been married 10 years and they have no children. Everyone thought they were ideally suited and blissfully happy. Why? Why? Why?

NO COMPRE

Dear No: Maybe he is going through the male menopause and is off his trolley. Or, perhaps, that cheap, loud, crude, ignorant gold-digging tramp fills an emotional need in the man that his beautiful, brilliant, accomplished, generous, loving wife does not.

Do you feel ill at ease . . . out of it? Is everybody having a good time but you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity," enclosing with your request 35¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The fact that Paris doesn't even have a railroad siding hasn't bothered people much. The Wabash Cannonball used to whistle by town in the old days as a constant reminder of this, and everyone's sort of used to it by now. Besides, trucking to Mexico is just as fast.

But, it's facing these problems, Si Colborn feels, that has changed life for him, the country editor, most. There's a growing sophistication in the farmlands and Si Colborn's knowledge of economics and politics, especially in Monroe County, is anything but naive. He says he can't afford to have it any other way.

During Gov. John Dalton's last term, Si Colborn served as an honorary Colonel and he is now an adviser to the Missouri Historical Society.

Three years ago, he journeyed to New York City with the Governor to seek more industry for the State. That he was selected as one of Missouri's travelling salesmen is testimony to his influence.

But nothing came of the trip as far as business goes. Nevertheless, Si Colborn likes to speak fondly of the Knickerbocker Brewery "down town next to some high rise apartment houses" that wouldn't move to Missouri for anything.

Television, of course, can't be kept out. If twenty years ago there was hardly a farmer without an electrical outlet, today there's hardly a farmer with an electrical outlet that hasn't heard of Soupy Sales.

It's true that some of Paris's residents still prefer farm auctions to Johnny Carson, but once they would have been more than two channels apart.

Si Colborn, who is 65, is well aware of this change. Television he complains, has made the people of Paris impatient. "These days," he says, "preachers can't preach for an hour and a half the way they used to. No one'll sit in Church and listen that long. Twenty minutes is the most they put up with."

Si Colborn wonders aloud how long they'll be patient enough to read, and to read his newspaper. Mechanical costs are soaring, competition is getting keener from other newspapers, especially dailies, his plant is outdated and the young people aren't taking an interest in local affairs the way they should: These are the things that Si Colborn is worried about.

Circulation Unchanged Means Income Unchanged

Since circulation has barely changed in twenty years (it's still somewhat under 3,000) advertising continues to sell for 43 cents a line. Inflation is a source of concern. Si Colborn's income has remained fairly constant. He'd like to convert to offset, but can't afford it.

On the editorial side, however, there's no problem. Si Colborn maintains what he feels is a "high standard." It's his personal pride. And in Missouri, he insists, personal pride is a way of life. ("You have to live with your readers, sure, but you don't have to be afraid of them.") When his advertising manager skipped town several years ago because

He also says it is necessary to have opinions on everything—and he does. His editorials range from the Vietnam crisis to how come there was a basketball game on a day when school was closed due to a snow storm.

Si Colborn, it might be said, is probably the number one citizen around Paris, although by his own admission he couldn't get elected dog-catcher. By having his own opinions and by selfishly cherishing his independence, he says, he's probably made as many enemies as friends. Once he had to face a shotgun-carrying father who was angered by a story he didn't want printed about his daughter.

Still, like Jack Blanton before him, and Pappy Blanton before him, his blue eyes light up when it's time for a fight, and his warm, sincere smile lulls an opponent into believing that he'll leave intact. Si Colborn wouldn't do violence to a fly, but he's probably won an awful lot of arguments that way. He talked the shotgun-carrying father into going home.

Life in Paris, Mo., Changes—But Not Much

So if in the final analysis Si Colborn, and Paris, Mo., and the Monroe County Appeal sound like they're all a part of the past, they are. If they are paradoxically contemporary, they're that too.

Life in Paris has changed some in the last twenty years—so have the people, and so have the editors at the Monroe County Appeal. Sociologically, if you prefer—things are different. They've got to be.

Yet at the Monroe County Appeal three successively keen-eyed, wily-witted editors, politically influential and economically well-versed, have calmly watched generations of farmers replace one form of progress with another.

What maintains the continuum? Well, perhaps it's the paper itself that keeps the spirit of the country editor alive. Who knows, even, if bearded "Pappy" Blanton doesn't sneak in at night to write the editorials?

Hearnes Calls For Changes In System

COLUMBIA, Mo. - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes says "we are going to have to modernize and reorganize some of the antiquated machinery of our state government."

He made the comment Saturday night in a speech prepared for the annual convention of the Young Democratic Clubs of Missouri.

"Much of the mechanics of our state government," he said, "was developed as much as a century ago to serve an agricultural society. Proof in point, look at our insurance laws many of them dating back to the mid-1800s.

"Where necessary, Missouri is going to have to reform her system of state and local governments so these governments can cope effectively with the increased responsibilities which are ours.

"The party which provides the leadership and the initiative to effect this reform will be the dominant party of Missouri in the years to come. I am convinced that it will be the Democratic party and already we are way out in front."

Hearnes said Missouri must develop a comprehensive state plan "so that our growth will be a planned growth, so that our economy will be a planned economy designed to fit the various needs of our multiple industries and occupations."

Hearnes said such advanced planning is essential in several fields. He named state facilities, recreation, land use, the state's economy, intercity transportation, population growth and shift, recreation resources and needs.

The governor emphasized "that failure to plan will weaken state government, burden the economy with waste and unnecessary taxation and serve as an open invitation to the party of opposition to attack."

He appealed to the Young Democrats to work together "to serve the people and serve responsibility."

Water Lines Near Completion

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Water Supply District No. 1 of Pemiscot County, the construction of which was begun in October 1964, is rapidly nearing the point where residents along the water lines will soon be water users.

In fact, a few of the customers-to-be are already being served in a sort of a fashion because their pumping equipment has "gone out" on them and it would be a financial burden if they had to replace worn-out equipment with the water district wintin a week, or two weeks at the most, away from service.

All the lines have been laid, connections made from the water district lines to the meter boxes, and in most instances lines laid from the houses to the meter box, and actually meters are in but not turned on.

All lines are down and ready to put water into users home or wherever it is to go, all equipment is in place, the water storage towers at the plant in the Chapel community, four miles west of Caruthersville, and at Braggadocio are about ready and the two booster pump equipment is in place.

According to Robert Moore, superintendent in charge of construction for the Casey-Turner & Moore Construction Co., of Tulsa, Okla., contractors on the job, there are a couple of things that have to be done before water can be turned on and the keys handed over to the water district officials.

Ark - Mo Power Company workmen have to complete a third line to the Cottonwood area booster pump station, about three miles north of Cottonwood Point, where a 3 phase, 60 cycle booster pump keeps the water pressure working on that end of the line. A similar booster pump is located about one mile east of Braggadocio.

ASSEMBLY CHOOSES OWN FISCAL OFFICER

The state Committee on Fiscal Affairs, created after three attempts by the General Assembly and signed into law March 3 by Governor Warren Hearnes, has selected its first fiscal officer as a watchdog over state appropriations.

The new officer is Arthur W. Betts, a veteran of nearly 20 years' experience in state government who prior to accepting this position had been chief analyst for the office of the Comptroller and Budget Direc. He resigned this position in January.

The latter office is directly controlled by the executive branch of Missouri's government while in his new capacity, Betts will answer solely to the Committee on Fiscal Affairs headed by Rep. Bernard (Doc) Simcoe, a Callaway County Democrat who also heads the House Appropriations Committee.

There are many who have felt that creation of such an agency would cause a duplication of the work done by the budget office. This is forbidden under provisions of the bill but was partially former Gov. John Dalton's reason for vetoing a similar proposal.

Betts served under the administration of both Blair and Dalton. He also has worked in the office of Legislative Research, the outfit charged with drafting bills for members of the General Assembly.

Thus, Betts acknowledges that he has worked both sides of a highly competitive political fence and now has returned to the folds of the legislature.

Neither Simcoe nor Betts feels that the fiscal officer will be duplicating the budget office's work but now they are working from the ground up and remain somewhat uncertain as to what exactly lies ahead.

The policy adopted by the committee as a blueprint for Betts to follow provides that any legislator seeking information on fiscal matters must first apply to the committee and if approved, Betts will investigate.

It is apparent that the General Assembly, in finally winning approval of its own fiscal watchdog, wants to play a greater role in determining how state appropriations are being carried out, if the money sought by agencies and departments is justified and similar activities.

Prior to creation of the committee, the General Assembly was at the mercy of the executive branch as far as determining money matters. By setting up its own committee, the legislature thus will achieve more governmental independence.

Simcoe said that cooperation shown by Governor Hearnes and the budget office staff is commendable, but added that this hasn't always been the case.

MO. CHURCH COUNCIL BACKS BRACERO LAW

The Missouri Council of Churches has contacted all Missouri members of Congress as well as Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz to express its support of the Labor Department's ban on the importation of migrant workers into the United States.

The effect in Missouri of this anti-bracero policy is being felt in a strange manner. Missouri has had no bracero laborers since 1961 and then it was mainly in cotton chopping in the bootheel.

However, according to the Missouri Division of Employment Security the anti-bracero action is placing this state in more of a position of supplying a labor force for other states, such as California which has been hardest hit by the change.

Representatives of large farm operations in California were to be in Missouri this week seeking laborers.

The Council of Churches, which normally involves itself in church-related matters, has taken the stand that migrant American workers were being "dispossessed, disadvantaged and discriminated against" under the former practice of importing workers from Mexico.

What such pious organizations apparently fail to realize is the difficulty large farm operators have in securing adequate American laborers for picking their crops, much of which remains a job to be done by hand.

In the news recently was a report that one California strawberry grower plowed under this year's crop because it was rotting on the ground with no pickers available.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENTS

It appears now the position of county superintendents of schools will be abolished for areas where they are not needed. A bill to this effect has passed both houses of the General Assembly in one form or another.

The Senate has returned the bill to the House for acceptance of minor changes. One Senator reported that at present 26 Missouri counties have no superintendents because the job is useless there.

The fact that Paris doesn't even have a railroad siding hasn't bothered people much. The Wabash Cannonball used to whistle by town in the old days as a constant reminder of this, and everyone's sort of used to it by now. Besides, trucking to Mexico is just as fast.

But, it's facing these problems, Si Colborn feels, that has changed life for him, the country editor, most. There's a growing sophistication in the farmlands and Si Colborn's knowledge of economics and politics, especially in Monroe County, is anything but naive. He says he can't afford to have it any other way.

During Gov. John Dalton's last term, Si Colborn served as an honorary Colonel and he is now an adviser to the Missouri Historical Society.

Three years ago, he journeyed to New York City with the Governor to seek more industry for the State. That he was selected as one of Missouri's travelling salesmen is testimony to his influence.

But nothing came of the trip as far as business goes. Nevertheless, Si Colborn likes to speak fondly of the Knickerbocker Brewery "down town next to some high rise apartment houses" that wouldn't move to Missouri for anything.

Television, of course, can't be kept out. If twenty years ago there was hardly a farmer without an electrical outlet, today there's hardly a farmer with an electrical outlet that hasn't heard of Soupy Sales.

It's true that some of Paris's residents still prefer farm auctions to Johnny Carson, but once they would have been more than two channels apart.

Si Colborn, who is 65, is well aware of this change. Television he complains, has made the people of Paris impatient. "These days," he says, "preachers can't preach for an hour and a half the way they used to. No one'll sit in Church and listen that long. Twenty minutes is the most they put up with."

Si Colborn wonders aloud how long they'll be patient enough to read, and to read his newspaper. Mechanical costs are soaring, competition is getting keener from other newspapers, especially dailies, his plant is outdated and the young people aren't taking an interest in local affairs the way they should: These are the things that Si Colborn is worried about.

Circulation Unchanged Means Income Unchanged

Since circulation has barely changed in twenty years (it's still somewhat under 3,000) advertising continues to sell for 43 cents a line. Inflation is a source of concern. Si Colborn's income has remained fairly constant. He'd like to convert to offset, but can't afford it.

On the editorial side, however, there's no problem. Si Colborn maintains what he feels is a "high standard." It's his personal pride. And in Missouri, he insists, personal pride is a way of life. ("You have to live with your readers, sure, but you don't have to be afraid of them.") When his advertising manager skipped town several years ago because

He also says it is necessary to have opinions on everything—and he does. His editorials range from the Vietnam crisis to how come there was a basketball game on a day when school was closed due to a snow storm.

Si Colborn, it might be said, is probably the number one citizen around Paris, although by his own admission he couldn't get elected dog-catcher. By having his own opinions and by selfishly cherishing his independence, he says, he's probably made as many enemies as friends. Once he had to face a shotgun-carrying father who was angered by a story he didn't want printed about his daughter.

Still, like Jack Blanton before him, and Pappy Blanton before him, his blue eyes light up when it's time for a fight, and his warm, sincere smile lulls an opponent into believing that he'll leave intact. Si Colborn wouldn't do violence to a fly, but he's probably won an awful lot of arguments that way. He talked the shotgun-carrying father into going home.

Life in Paris, Mo., Changes—But Not Much

So if in the final analysis Si Colborn, and Paris, Mo., and the Monroe County Appeal sound like they're all a part of the past, they are. If they are paradoxically contemporary, they're that too.

Life in Paris has changed some in the last twenty years—so have the people, and so have the editors at the Monroe County Appeal. Sociologically, if you prefer—things are different. They've got to be.

Yet at the Monroe County Appeal three successively keen-eyed, wily-witted editors, politically influential and economically well-versed, have calmly watched generations of farmers replace one form of progress with another.

What maintains the continuum? Well, perhaps it's the paper itself that keeps the spirit of the country editor alive. Who knows, even, if bearded "Pappy" Blanton doesn't sneak in at night to write the editorials?

Hearnes Calls For Changes In System

COLUMBIA, Mo. - Gov. Warren E. Hearnes says "we are going to have to modernize and reorganize some of the antiquated machinery of our state government."

He made the comment Saturday night in a speech prepared for the annual convention of the Young Democratic Clubs of Missouri.

"Much of the mechanics of our state government," he said, "was developed as much as a century ago to serve an agricultural society. Proof in point, look at our insurance laws, many of them dating back to the mid-1800s.

"Where necessary, Missouri is going to have to reform her system of state and local governments so these governments can cope effectively with the increased responsibilities which are ours.

"The party which provides the leadership and the initiative to effect this reform will be the dominant party of Missouri in the years to come. I am convinced that it will be the Democratic party and already we are way out in front."

Hearnes said Missouri must develop a comprehensive state plan "so that our growth will be a planned growth, so that our economy will be a planned economy designed to fit the various needs of our multiple industries and occupations."

Hearnes said such advanced planning is essential in several fields. He named state facilities, recreation, land use, the state's economy, intercity transportation, population growth and shift, recreation resources and needs.

The governor emphasized "that failure to plan will weaken state government, burden the economy with waste and unnecessary taxation and serve as an open invitation to the party of opposition to attack."

He appealed to the Young Democrats to work together "to serve the people and serve responsibility."

Water Lines Near Completion

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Water Supply District No. 1 of Pemiscot County, the construction of which was begun in October 1964, is rapidly nearing the point where residents along the water lines will soon be water users.

In fact, a few of the customers-to-be are already being served in a sort of a fashion because their pumping equipment has "gone out" on them and it would be a financial burden if they had to replace worn-out equipment with the water district wintin a week, or two weeks at the most, away from service.

All the lines have been laid, connections made from the water district lines to the meter boxes, and in most instances lines laid from the houses to the meter box, and actually meters are in but not turned on.

All lines are down and ready to put water into users home or wherever it is to go, all equipment is in place, the water storage towers at the plant in the Chapel community, four miles west of Caruthersville, and at Braggadocio are about ready and the two booster pump equipment is in place.

According to Robert Moore, superintendent in charge of construction for the Casey-Turner & Moore Construction Co., of Tulsa, Okla., contractors on the job, there are a couple of things that have to be done before water can be turned on and the keys handed over to the water district officials.

Ark - Mo Power Company workmen have to complete a third line to the Cottonwood area booster pump station, about three miles north of Cottonwood Point, where a 3 phase, 60 cycle booster pump keeps the water pressure working on that end of the line. A similar booster pump is located about one mile east of Braggadocio.

ASSEMBLY CHOOSES OWN FISCAL OFFICER

The state Committee on Fiscal Affairs, created after three attempts by the General Assembly and signed into law March 3 by Governor Warren Hearnes, has selected its first fiscal officer as a watchdog over state appropriations.

The new officer is Arthur W. Betts, a veteran of nearly 20 years' experience in state government who prior to accepting this position had been chief analyst for the office of the Comptroller and Budget Direc. He resigned this position in January.

The latter office is directly controlled by the executive branch of Missouri's government while in his new capacity, Betts will answer solely to the Committee on Fiscal Affairs headed by Rep. Bernard (Doc) Simcoe, a Callaway County Democrat who also heads the House Appropriations Committee.

There are many who have felt that creation of such an agency would cause a duplication of the work done by the budget office. This is forbidden under provisions of the bill but was partially former Gov. John Dalton's reason for vetoing a similar proposal.

Betts served under the administration of both Blair and Dalton. He also has worked in the office of Legislative Research, the outfit charged with drafting bills for members of the General Assembly.

Thus, Betts acknowledges that he has worked both sides of a highly competitive political fence and now has returned to the folds of the legislature.

Neither Simcoe nor Betts feels that the fiscal officer will be duplicating the budget office's work but now they are working from the ground up and remain somewhat uncertain as to what exactly lies ahead.

The policy adopted by the committee as a blueprint for Betts to follow provides that any legislator seeking information on fiscal matters must first apply to the committee and if approved, Betts will investigate.

It is apparent that the General Assembly, in finally winning approval of its own fiscal watchdog, wants to play a greater role in determining how state appropriations are being carried out, if the money sought by agencies and departments is justified and similar activities.

Prior to creation of the committee, the General Assembly was at the mercy of the executive branch as far as determining money matters. By setting up its own committee, the legislature thus will achieve more governmental independence.

Simcoe said that cooperation shown by Governor Hearnes and the budget office staff is commendable, but added that this hasn't always been the case.

MO. CHURCH COUNCIL BACKS BRACERO LAW

The Missouri Council of Churches has contacted all Missouri members of Congress as well as Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz to express its support of the Labor Department's ban on the importation of migrant workers into the United States.

The effect in Missouri of this anti-bracero policy is being felt in a strange manner. Missouri has had no bracero laborers since 1961 and then it was mainly in cotton chopping in the bootheel.

However, according to the Missouri Division of Employment Security the anti-bracero action is placing this state in more of a position of supplying a labor force for other states, such as California which has been hardest hit by the change.

Representatives of large farm operations in California were to be in Missouri this week seeking laborers.

The Council of Churches, which normally involves itself in church-related matters, has taken the stand that migrant American workers were being "dispossessed, disadvantaged and discriminated against" under the former practice of importing workers from Mexico.

What such pious organizations apparently fail to realize is the difficulty large farm operators have in securing adequate American laborers for picking their crops, much of which remains a job to be done by hand.

In the news recently was a report that one California strawberry grower plowed under this year's crop because it was rotting on the ground with no pickers available.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENTS

It appears now the position of county superintendents of schools will be abolished for areas where they are not needed. A bill to this effect has passed both houses of the General Assembly in one form or another.

The Senate has returned the bill to the House for acceptance of minor changes. One Senator reported that at present 26 Missouri counties have no superintendents because the job is useless there.

Fertility & Sterility

FEMALE INFERTILITY

Much more is known of female infertility, if only because women have more readily submitted to examination, study and therapy. Their problems are divided into two categories:

Primary infertility describes cases in which women have not been able to conceive after at least one year of effort.

Secondary infertility describes cases in which women:

1. Have had one child but are subsequently infertile.
2. Suffer repeated miscarriages.
3. Repeatedly deliver so prematurely that the infant cannot survive.
4. Fail to conceive for no discernible reason; this group is referred to as the idiopathically infertile (unknown cause).

Until recently, the prognosis was bleak for women who did not ovulate. Either their pituitaries were not secreting enough follicle-stimulating hormone to stimulate the production of ova or the ovaries themselves were malfunctioning.

HORMONE SUPPLEMENTATION

In an early therapeutic attack on this problem, the serum of pregnant mares was administered inasmuch as it was rich in FSH. This approach failed for reasons later ascribed to species specificity — the human organism could not utilize equine material. Later, human FSH was employed, but it failed, too — something else was needed.

About six years ago, Dr. Carl Gemzell, of the University of Uppsala, Sweden, devised a successful approach. He combined human FSH with human chorionic gonadotropin (HCG), another hormone, and induced pregnancies in a number of women who had not been ovulating.

Moreover, a number of multiple births appeared, and in a case of miscarriage Dr. Gemzell noted seven well-formed fetuses. The FSH-HCG treatment was the one given the Queens, New York, woman who delivered healthy quadruplets in 1963. Further research on these hormones, as well as on a synthetic ovulation-inducer known as clomiphene citrate, is now being conducted by several American researchers.

TECHNIQUES FROM SURGERY

Surgery, too, has played a considerable role in overcoming female infertility. In one condition the pituitary is functioning normally but ovulation is blocked by small cysts on an ovary. In some cases of this kind, success has been achieved through wedge-resection — a pie-shaped bit of ovarian tissue is removed. Often the slightly smaller ovary will then function normally.

When I Was A Boy

As compiled by Ralph Gregory, Curator of the Mark Twain Shrine, Florida, from the writings of the founder of the Appeal, B. F. "Pappy" Blanton, in 1919-20. A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes. (Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

B. F. "Pappy" Blanton

When I was a boy it was very common for women to have quilting on the same day the men had a house raising or log rolling. Then men would come in from all over the neighborhood and raise a barn or pile the logs while the women and girls did the quilting. At noon all sat down to a feast of good things made up of the best the land afforded. One never sees such a feast these days.

When I was a boy there was a big public sale in the neighborhood of the stuff belonging to a dead man's estate. The man farmed on a large scale and worked many slaves but when he died it was found that he was bankrupt. Fine country hams, as nice looking as you ever saw, bro't only 2 1/2 cents a pound while side meat was hard to sell at any price. Ge whiz, just think of hams, good ones, selling at that. Buy one now and it will cost you near to 50 cents a pound.

When I was a boy doctors usually bled their patients for almost every ailment to which flesh is heir. If a patient had typhoid or any other fever they would lance his arm and catch the blood in a wash pan. Times have changed since then. Now a doctor only bleeds a patient's pocket book.

When I was a boy a young fellow with a young wife saved his money until he had $30 in cash. He decided to buy up a bunch of calves with this surplus wealth one fall and actually bought thirteen of them and had $20 left. It proved to be a good investment for stock went up in price and the next spring he sold them and more than doubled his money. That $30 would not buy one calf now.

When I was a boy there was nothing but scrub cattle and hogs in the country but the horse stock was better. The hogs were regular razorbacks and were rarely fattened until they were from one to two years old. Away back there there was generally a big crop of acorns and nuts and hogs got as fat as you ask for without any corn, but I remember people said acorns made the lard too much like oil so many penned up their hogs and fed them on corn to make the lard better.

When I was a boy there was not a red fox or fox squirrel to be found in the country, both foxes and squirrels being gray. Now it is a rare thing to see a gray squirrel or a gray fox, all being red. I understand the red foxes were brought here from Kentucky and killed off the grays. How true this is I do not know.

When I was a boy good farm hands could be hired for $13 to $15 a month for the entire season, including harvest of all kinds. This included their board and washing. Now good farm hands are getting from $40 to $60 a month and do not have to work half as hard as men did in the long ago. You see men ride and do most of their work on the farm now.

When I was a boy I knew an old fellow named Elam Sterns. He got drunk as a lord mighty often and always wanted to climb a tree when in that condition. When climbing he was always saying, "My name is Elam, always behind." The boys had lots of fun with him. He was all right when sober and had been a drummer in the war of 1812. Guess he got to Heaven as he was always climbing up while living.

When I was a boy nearly all farm houses were built near a spring, as people evidently did not know anything about digging a cistern or well. At least they did not have a well in our neighborhood until I was 10 years old and that was at our home. Plenty of water was found at 16 feet. It was a wonder. We drew the water with a rope attached to a bucket.

When I was a boy coon hunting put more thrills in a boy than an airplane does now. Lord, what excitment there was when a tree was cut down and the coon jumped out, was grabbed by the dogs and the fight was on in earnest. Sometimes an old fashioned coon would whip two or three dogs. Boys now don't know what excitment is unless they have witnessed a real old-fashioned coon fight.

When I was a boy once or twice a year all men of military age met at some place to drill. This was a great day for everybody, old and young, white and black, as all went to these "muster" days. One of my uncles was a major and when he was dressed up in his uniform and on a fine horse I thought he was the greatest man in the world. I believe now that men of the proper age should be drilled just as they were then.

When I was a boy eggs sold 3¢ to 5¢ a dozen, and if a washing tub full of eggs had been taken to the average town it would have gutted the market and had some left unsold. There was no way to ship eggs to the cities as there is now. Now it is a common thing for any town to receive several thousand dozen eggs in a day.

When I was a boy I often wondered if I would ever be a man like my uncles, little dreaming of the struggles to come to me before I was as old as they. But time never stops and the whirligig of time has brought me to where I can almost see the end of earthly things, but I feel that I have done the best I could and have not the least ill will toward a living soul, yet at times I would I were a boy again,

When every day seemed two or three.
I fell asleep upon the floor
And dreamed of happy days to see.

'Pet' Among Gardeners

"The growing of this fascinating plant, once a rare horticultural curiosity originally found only in certain sandy swamps in North Carolina which recently became available to nearly everyone, is the latest fad among home gardeners," according to Lamar Little, head of horticultural activities of F. W. Woolworth Co., one of the world's largest outlets for live plants and garden accessories.

The Venus Fly Trap is becoming popular because it is so completely unique among house plants, Mr. Little said. He noted that Charles Darwin, the great naturalist, said the plant is "the most wonderful" in the world.

It is a small perennial herb, with a rosette of leaves and often small white flowers, which thrives under warm, moist conditions.

The leaf blade of the plant is constructed by nature so as to work like the teeth of a trap, with two halves, which when open are at an angle of about 50 degrees, snapping together and the marginal bristles --about 13 in number--interlocking like the teeth of a trap, Mr. Little explained.

This trap is sprung by sensitive hairs, like feelers, that line the inner surface of the leaf blade. When one of these hairs is touched twice, or two or more of them touched once by a small fly or hovering insect, the trap snaps shut in less than one-fourth of a second and the insect is caught.

Amazingly, if the insect is small or of little food value, it is allowed to escape and the trap opens to await another victim. Home gardeners are finding that the Venus Fly Trap thrives on small pieces of hamburger.

When the insect or meat has been trapped, the secretion of digestive enzymes starts and the food is digested and absorbed into the plant's circulatory system. This action takes about ten days, after which the leaf blade reopens to await the next morsel of food, Mr. Little explained.

Scientists know that the closing of the leaf blades is accompanied by minute electrical disturbances like those which occur in the muscles of man and animals, but they do not fully understand the process, the Woolworth expert noted.

"The Venus Fly Trap is nature's miracle -- and also nature's enigma," Mr. Little said. "Perhaps that is why it is becoming so popular," he concluded.

Fertility & Sterility

FEMALE INFERTILITY

Much more is known of female infertility, if only because women have more readily submitted to examination, study and therapy. Their problems are divided into two categories:

Primary infertility describes cases in which women have not been able to conceive after at least one year of effort.

Secondary infertility describes cases in which women:

1. Have had one child but are subsequently infertile.
2. Suffer repeated miscarriages.
3. Repeatedly deliver so prematurely that the infant cannot survive.
4. Fail to conceive for no discernible reason; this group is referred to as the idiopathically infertile (unknown cause).

Until recently, the prognosis was bleak for women who did not ovulate. Either their pituitaries were not secreting enough follicle-stimulating hormone to stimulate the production of ova or the ovaries themselves were malfunctioning.

HORMONE SUPPLEMENTATION

In an early therapeutic attack on this problem, the serum of pregnant mares was administered inasmuch as it was rich in FSH. This approach failed for reasons later ascribed to species specificity — the human organism could not utilize equine material. Later, human FSH was employed, but it failed, too — something else was needed.

About six years ago, Dr. Carl Gemzell, of the University of Uppsala, Sweden, devised a successful approach. He combined human FSH with human chorionic gonadotropin (HCG), another hormone, and induced pregnancies in a number of women who had not been ovulating.

Moreover, a number of multiple births appeared, and in a case of miscarriage Dr. Gemzell noted seven well-formed fetuses. The FSH-HCG treatment was the one given the Queens, New York, woman who delivered healthy quadruplets in 1963. Further research on these hormones, as well as on a synthetic ovulation-inducer known as clomiphene citrate, is now being conducted by several American researchers.

TECHNIQUES FROM SURGERY

Surgery, too, has played a considerable role in overcoming female infertility. In one condition the pituitary is functioning normally but ovulation is blocked by small cysts on an ovary. In some cases of this kind, success has been achieved through wedge-resection — a pie-shaped bit of ovarian tissue is removed. Often the slightly smaller ovary will then function normally.

When I Was A Boy

B. F. "Pappy" Blanton

As compiled by Ralph Gregory, Curator of the Mark Twain Shrine, Florida, from the writings of the founder of the Appeal, B. F. "Pappy" Blanton, in 1919-20. A contemporary of Mark Twain, "Pappy" Blanton wrote of the times and customs that were so dear to Twain, and about which Twain wrote so many interesting and humorous anecdotes. (Verbatim copy, with some questions and guesses as to missing words)

When I was a boy it was very common for women to have quilting on the same day the men had a house raising or log rolling. Then men would come in from all over the neighborhood and raise a barn or pile the logs while the women and girls did the quilting. At noon all sat down to a feast of good things made up of the best the land afforded. One never sees such a feast these days.

When I was a boy there was a big public sale in the neighborhood of the stuff belonging to a dead man's estate. The man farmed on a large scale and worked many slaves but when he died it was found that he was bankrupt. Fine country hams, as nice looking as you ever saw, bro't only 2 1/2 cents a pound while side meat was hard to sell at any price. Ge whiz, just think of hams, good ones, selling at that. Buy one now and it will cost you near to 50 cents a pound.

When I was a boy doctors usually bled their patients for almost every ailment to which flesh is heir. If a patient had typhoid or any other fever they would lance his arm and catch the blood in a wash pan. Times have changed since then. Now a doctor only bleeds a patient's pocket book.

When I was a boy a young fellow with a young wife saved his money until he had $30 in cash. He decided to buy up a bunch of calves with this surplus wealth one fall and actually bought thirteen of them and had $20 left. It proved to be a good investment for stock went up in price and the next spring he sold them and more than doubled his money. That $30 would not buy one calf now.

When I was a boy there was nothing but scrub cattle and hogs in the country but the horse stock was better. The hogs were regular razorbacks and were rarely fattened until they were from one to two years old. Away back there there was generally a big crop of acorns and nuts and hogs got as fat as you ask for without any corn, but I remember people said acorns made the lard too much like oil so many penned up their hogs and fed them on corn to make the lard better.

When I was a boy there was not a red fox or fox squirrel to be found in the country, both foxes and squirrels being gray. Now it is a rare thing to see a gray squirrel or a gray fox, all being red. I understand the red foxes were brought here from Kentucky and killed off the grays. How true this is I do not know.

When I was a boy good farm hands could be hired for $13 to $15 a month for the entire season, including harvest of all kinds. This included their board and washing. Now good farm hands are getting from $40 to $60 a month and do not have to work half as hard as men did in the long ago. You see men ride and do most of their work on the farm now.

When I was a boy I knew an old fellow named Elam Sterns. He got drunk as a lord mighty often and always wanted to climb a tree when in that condition. When climbing he was always saying, "My name is Elam, always behind." The boys had lots of fun with him. He was all right when sober and had been a drummer in the war of 1812. Guess he got to Heaven as he was always climbing up while living.

When I was a boy nearly all farm houses were built near a spring, as people evidently did not know anything about digging a cistern or well. At least they did not have a well in our neighborhood until I was 10 years old and that was at our home. Plenty of water was found at 16 feet. It was a wonder. We drew the water with a rope attached to a bucket.

When I was a boy coon hunting put more thrills in a boy than an airplane does now. Lord, what excitment there was when a tree was cut down and the coon jumped out, was grabbed by the dogs and the fight was on in earnest. Sometimes an old fashioned coon would whip two or three dogs. Boys now don't know what excitment is unless they have witnessed a real old-fashioned coon fight.

When I was a boy once or twice a year all men of military age met at some place to drill. This was a great day for everybody, old and young, white and black, as all went to these "muster" days. One of my uncles was a major and when he was dressed up in his uniform and on a fine horse I thought he was the greatest man in the world. I believe now that men of the proper age should be drilled just as they were then.

When I was a boy eggs sold 3¢ to 5¢ a dozen, and if a washing tub full of eggs had been taken to the average town it would have gutted the market and had some left unsold. There was no way to ship eggs to the cities as there is now. Now it is a common thing for any town to receive several thousand dozen eggs in a day.

When I was a boy I often wondered if I would ever be a man like my uncles, little dreaming of the struggles to come to me before I was as old as they. But time never stops and the whirligig of time has brought me to where I can almost see the end of earthly things, but I feel that I have done the best I could and have not the least ill will toward a living soul, yet at times I would I were a boy again,

When every day seemed two or three.
I fell asleep upon the floor
And dreamed of happy days to see.

'Pet' Among Gardeners

"The growing of this fascinating plant, once a rare horticultural curiosity originally found only in certain sandy swamps in North Carolina which recently became available to nearly everyone, is the latest fad among home gardeners," according to Lamar Little, head of horticultural activities of F. W. Woolworth Co., one of the world's largest outlets for live plants and garden accessories.

The Venus Fly Trap is becoming popular because it is so completely unique among house plants, Mr. Little said. He noted that Charles Darwin, the great naturalist, said the plant is "the most wonderful" in the world.

It is a small perennial herb, with a rosette of leaves and often small white flowers, which thrives under warm, moist conditions.

The leaf blade of the plant is constructed by nature so as to work like the teeth of a trap, with two halves, which when open are at an angle of about 50 degrees, snapping together and the marginal bristles --about 13 in number--interlocking like the teeth of a trap, Mr. Little explained.

This trap is sprung by sensitive hairs, like feelers, that line the inner surface of the leaf blade. When one of these hairs is touched twice, or two or more of them touched once by a small fly or hovering insect, the trap snaps shut in less than one-fourth of a second and the insect is caught.

Amazingly, if the insect is small or of little food value, it is allowed to escape and the trap opens to await another victim. Home gardeners are finding that the Venus Fly Trap thrives on small pieces of hamburger.

When the insect or meat has been trapped, the secretion of digestive enzymes starts and the food is digested and absorbed into the plant's circulatory system. This action takes about ten days, after which the leaf blade reopens to await the next morsel of food, Mr. Little explained.

Scientists know that the closing of the leaf blades is accompanied by minute electrical disturbances like those which occur in the muscles of man and animals, but they do not fully understand the process, the Woolworth expert noted.

"The Venus Fly Trap is nature's miracle -- and also nature's enigma," Mr. Little said. "Perhaps that is why it is becoming so popular," he concluded.

A LION TO LOVE

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — "I think everyone should have a lion, they're so lovable," believes Mrs. David P. Relling, who practices what she preaches. Adalord, a 265-pound lion, is a family pet.

The two-year-old king of beasts has been rendered a bit more lovable by Dr. Relling, a veterinarian, who spent eight hours in surgery removing Adalord's teeth. His claws have also been clipped. The lion, which downs 12 pounds of canned cat and dog food daily, has been generally well accepted in the neighborhood, the Rellings report.

Market Dull Before Martin Warning

NEW YORK - William McChesney Martin has been linked in the public mind with the most recent break in stock market prices. But before the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board warned against overconfidence the current downturn in stock market prices was already two weeks old.

And even the brief upsurge that had brought the market to a peak May 14 had followed a long period of hesitation.

The fears Martin is credited with bringing to public attention have been discussed in market circles much of this year.

Some of the uncertainties have to do with the economy in general. How long can it continue to advance? And how steep the climb? Will it become overheated?

Other nagging doubts have to do with the stock market itself.

Prices of many issues have gone up faster than yields. Corporate dividends have risen, but not as fast as prices of some of the popular shares. This means that returns on dollars invested at today's market prices are smaller than a few months back. The yields also are smaller than obtainable from less glamorous but perhaps safer investments.

Corporate profits have set a record high this year. But the rise in profit margins that has marked the last two years shows signs of petering out.

All that Martin, head of the nation's central banking system, did was to voice doubts that others had been discussing privately. Some of the worries -- which he didn't stress --centered on the chances of the economy keeping up its amazing growth rate, and on whether the stock market might already have discounted the gains expectable in the months ahead.

The stock market has been having its own troubles. For the public these have been linked with the 900 mark in the Dow-Jones averages of 30 industrial stocks. When this index crossed the 900 mark Jan. 28 the popular phrase was "the magic 900." But the volatile index slipped well below that later before finally recovering to climb to 939 May 14.

Some , however, think that 900 may still hold some magic as a resistance point to downward trends. Others talk about the "magic 1,000" they expect the indicator to cross before the year is out.

If it does, Martin will be forgiven -- in Wall Street, if not in all sectors of Washington.

A small night light takes very little electricity, but one installed in the bathroom enables children, even the small ones, to go to the bathroom without getting you out of bed.

Youngsters like things of their very own. One way to encouage a small child to wash his face and hands is to provide a pint-size wash cloth and towel for the purpose. Cut the squares from toweling to suit the child's age. Sew around the edges to prevent fraying.

stops
(before they stop you!)
What does the American FINAL/FILTER* really do? Automotive engineers know—they asked for it and American Oil Research developed it to stand between you and trouble. You see, all gasolines pick up tiny impurities in transit and in storage. These impurities, should they get in your gasoline tank, could clog up the fuel line filter and stop you cold. The American FINAL/FILTER stops harmful contaminants right at the pump nozzle. If you use your car on the job (and even if you don't), stay out of trouble—"fill 'er up filtered" with American Regular or American Super-Premium.

A LION TO LOVE

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — "I think everyone should have a lion, they're so lovable," believes Mrs. David P. Relling, who practices what she preaches. Adalord, a 265-pound lion, is a family pet.

The two-year-old king of beasts has been rendered a bit more lovable by Dr. Relling, a veterinarian, who spent eight hours in surgery removing Adalord's teeth. His claws have also been clipped. The lion, which downs 12 pounds of canned cat and dog food daily, has been generally well accepted in the neighborhood, the Rellings report.

Market Dull Before Martin Warning

NEW YORK - William McChesney Martin has been linked in the public mind with the most recent break in stock market prices. But before the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board warned against overconfidence the current downturn in stock market prices was already two weeks old.

And even the brief upsurge that had brought the market to a peak May 14 had followed a long period of hesitation.

The fears Martin is credited with bringing to public attention have been discussed in market circles much of this year.

Some of the uncertainties have to do with the economy in general. How long can it continue to advance? And how steep the climb? Will it become overheated?

Other nagging doubts have to do with the stock market itself.

Prices of many issues have gone up faster than yields. Corporate dividends have risen, but not as fast as prices of some of the popular shares. This means that returns on dollars invested at today's market prices are smaller than a few months back. The yields also are smaller than obtainable from less glamorous but perhaps safer investments.

Corporate profits have set a record high this year. But the rise in profit margins that has marked the last two years shows signs of petering out.

All that Martin, head of the nation's central banking system, did was to voice doubts that others had been discussing privately. Some of the worries -- which he didn't stress --centered on the chances of the economy keeping up its amazing growth rate, and on whether the stock market might already have discounted the gains expectable in the months ahead.

The stock market has been having its own troubles. For the public these have been linked with the 900 mark in the Dow-Jones averages of 30 industrial stocks. When this index crossed the 900 mark Jan. 28 the popular phrase was "the magic 900." But the volatile index slipped well below that later before finally recovering to climb to 939 May 14.

Some , however, think that 900 may still hold some magic as a resistance point to downward trends. Others talk about the "magic 1,000" they expect the indicator to cross before the year is out.

If it does, Martin will be forgiven -- in Wall Street, if not in all sectors of Washington.

A small night light takes very little electricity, but one installed in the bathroom enables children, even the small ones, to go to the bathroom without getting you out of bed.

Youngsters like things of their very own. One way to encouage a small child to wash his face and hands is to provide a pint-size wash cloth and towel for the purpose. Cut the squares from toweling to suit the child's age. Sew around the edges to prevent fraying.

stops
tiny particles in gasoline
(before they stop you!)
What does the American FINAL/FILTER* really do? Automotive engineers know—they asked for it and American Oil Research developed it to stand between you and trouble. You see, all gasolines pick up tiny impurities in transit and in storage. These impurities, should they get in your gasoline tank, could clog up the fuel line filter and stop you cold. The American FINAL/FILTER stops harmful contaminants right at the pump nozzle. If you use your car on the job (and even if you don't), stay out of trouble—"fill 'er up filtered" with American Regular or American Super-Premium.

HOLLYWOOD -- Are you a discontented housewife? Then listen to the saga of Phyllis Diller, who broke out of the kitchen at age 37.

That was 10 years ago. Since then she has become a leading figure of show business, a laugh-getter who can draw a half-million dollars per year "I was one of those life-of-the-party types," she explained during a brief stopover between engagements.

She felt no great urge to transform her comedic talent into cash. That incentive was thrust upon her. Phyllis and her husband, Sherwood Diller, were living in Alameda, Calif., with their five children and feeling the pinch of unsuccess.

She tried out for a job at San Francisco's Purple Onion and won it. But while other performers of the San Francisco school -- Kingston Trio, Mort Sahl, Smothers Brothers, etc. --found early success, Phyllis did not.

After five years of playing joints from coast to coast her unique style began to click with night clubs and television audiences. She comes onstage with outlandish garb and a frizz of white hair -- "it's actually nerve ends," -- and talks about housewifery, learning to drive and other catastrophies.

The Diller home is now in Webster Grove, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis. There husband Sherwood takes care of business matters and the children.

Phyllis was leaving for Florida to play a cosmetics tycoon in a movie. Her long-time goal is a television series so she could finally be united with her children, who range from 15 to 24. Maybe next year.

Genius Carl Reiner Denies He's a Genius

By JOAN CROSBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Carl Reiner would like to call a halt to what people are saying about him.

Those who work with the writer - producer - director - performer, and those who hope to, all say Reiner is a genius. He denies it vehemently.

"Look, I'm not a genius and I am 43 years old. If you're not a genius by 24, forget it. Charlie. I'm very good now. I want to be very, very good and maybe by the time I'm 50, very, very, very good. By the time you hit 55 to 60, you go back down to very good again and by 75, you get to be fair."

Between television seasons, Carl is working with Joe Stein (who wrote "Fiddler on the Roof") on the movie version of "Enter Laughing," the Broadway comedy based on Carl's novel with autobiographical touches.

"I wish I could play me in the movie. That would mean I would be 18 again. No, come to think of it, I don't want to be 18 again. I'd like to be 42 again. Last year was nice."

Carl hopes that he can convince both CBS and sponsors to run "60 block-buster" repeats of the Van Dyke series in prime evening time for the two seasons after the show goes off. He is also working on a new series, about a pair of disc jockeys, planned for telecasting in 1966-67, and already sold to one of Van Dyke's sponsors.

A happy man who is, too, touched with genius (a man who works closely with Reiner says he is one of the nicest people in show business), Carl says if he had his choice he would be one of two things: an opera singer or a baseball player.

"I lacked one big thing to be a baseball player. I couldn't throw strikes. I sing the same way, off-pitch, a little sharp and not quite in rhythm. I'm like the little tailor who said 'If I had Rockefeller's money, I'd be richer than Rockefeller, because I wouldn't give up the tailor shop!' If I could sing as good as Jolson, I'd be better than Jolson, because I could still write the Van Dyke show.

"The other day my wife, who has perfect pitch, said to me, 'You know, you took away one of my greatest pleasures when we got married.' I figured she was talking about dancing, since she likes to dance and I don't. But she said she was talking about singing harmony. So you see, life hasn't been all roses for her."

Next season will be the fifth and last for the consistently excellent Van Dyke Show. The decision to end the show while it is still at the peak in ratings and quality is a joint decision of Carl's, Dick's and Mary Tyler Moore's.

"We would have left after the third year if we thought the series was going on forever. I was going to leave in the third year and turn over the producing reins to someone else. But when we all got together and decided we would only stay on five years, I couldn't let it go."

HAIR TODAY AND GAUNT TOMORROW: When Carl Reiner takes "his hair" out of the closet he changes automatically from writer—producer—director into an actor—but he still retains his inimitable sense of humor.

The U.S. flag was first called the "Star-Spangled Banner" by Francis Scott Key in 1814, when he wrote the poem that became the national anthem. Another popular name for the flag, "Old Glory," originated later in the 1800's with William Driver, a sea captain from Salem, Mass. He first used the name for a flag some friends gave him when he took command of a ship.

Genius Carl Reiner Denies He's a Genius

By JOAN CROSBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Carl Reiner would like to call a halt to what people are saying about him.

Those who work with the writer - producer - director - performer, and those who hope to, all say Reiner is a genius. He denies it vehemently.

"Look, I'm not a genius and I am 43 years old. If you're not a genius by 24, forget it, Charlie. I'm very good now. I want to be very, very good and maybe by the time I'm 50, very, very, very good. By the time you hit 55 to 60, you go back down to very good again and by 75, you get to be fair."

HAIR TODAY AND GAUNT TOMORROW: When Carl Reiner takes "his hair" out of the closet he changes automatically from writer—producer—director into an actor —but he still retains his inimitable sense of humor.

Reiner, who produces The Dick Van Dyke Show, also has a film called "The Art of Love," which he wrote and in which he appears, and hosts CBS television's Celebrity Game. He says he will never give up performing, because he has a nice toupee and he doesn't like to let it just sit there in his closet.

"I'm like a girl who has a beautiful gown in the closet and no one asks her out," tall, good-looking, bald Carl said. "I have my hair, and Celebrity Game gives me a chance to put it on. Hair is formal. Anyone who wears hair in the afternoon is overdressed. It's gaudy."

Next season will be the fifth and last for the consistently excellent Van Dyke Show. The decision to end the show while it is still at the peak in ratings and quality is a joint decision of Carl's, Dick's and Mary Tyler Moore's.

"We would have left after the third year if we thought the series was going on forever. I was going to leave in the third year and turn over the producing reins to someone else. But when we all got together and decided we would only stay on five years, I couldn't let it go."

Between television seasons, Carl is working with Joe Stein (who wrote "Fiddler on the Roof") on the movie version of "Enter Laughing," the Broadway comedy based on Carl's novel with autobiographical touches.

"I wish I could play me in the movie. That would mean I would be 18 again. No, come to think of it, I don't want to be 18 again. I'd like to be 42 again. Last year was nice."

Carl hopes that he can convince both CBS and sponsors to run "60 block-buster" repeats of the Van Dyke series in prime evening time for the two seasons after the show goes off. He is also working on a new series, about a pair of disc jockeys, planned for telecasting in 1966-67, and already sold to one of Van Dyke's sponsors.

A happy man who is, too, touched with genius (a man who works closely with Reiner says he is one of the nicest people in show business), Carl says if he had his choice he would be one of two things: an opera singer or a baseball player.

"I lacked one big thing to be a baseball player. I couldn't throw strikes. I sing the same way, off-pitch, a little sharp and not quite in rhythm. I'm like the little tailor who said 'If I had Rockefeller's money, I'd be richer than Rockefeller, because I wouldn't give up the tailor shop!' If I could sing as good as Jolson, I'd be better than Jolson, because I could still write the Van Dyke show.

"The other day my wife, who has perfect pitch, said to me, 'You know, you took away one of my greatest pleasures when we got married.' I figured she was talking about dancing, since she likes to dance and I don't. But she said she was talking about singing harmony. So you see, life hasn't been all roses for her."
